Garfield Announces Action Follows Reports of "Vast Improvement" in Conditions.

McADOO UPHOLDS HIM

FREIGHT CONDITIONS BETTER

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—An official announcement that the order providing for heatless and workless Mondays until March 25 had been suspended was made today by Dr. H. A. Garfield, the Fuel Administrator. This action was concurred in by Director General of Railroads McAdoo.

Dr. Garfield's decision also lifts the ban placed on theatres, cabarets, and other places of amusement on Tuesdays of each week. The only drastic regulation remaining effective is that which provides for a preference list to which coal will first be shipped, other industries and interests being forced to depend upon their supply from surplus coal.

Reports from the various State Fuel Administrators, Dr. Garfield said, showed that with the single exception of J. J. Storrow of New England there was a unanimity of opinion that the closing restrictions could safely be withdrawn. It was intimated strongly that New England might hope for little relief at present.

State Fuel Administrators were vested with authority to keep the closing order in force in their individual communities if conditions warranted such action. Such decisions, however, will be reported to and passed on by Dr. Garfield before becoming effective.

Railroad Embargoes Remain.

Emphasis was laid on the fact that the action today did not constitute a rescinding of the order, but simply a suspension. Should weather conditions again cause a transportation and coal crisis it is possible that the order will again become generally effective. In the meantime railroad embargoes ordered by the Director General of Railroads will remain in force until there is further improvement in the whole situation.

In a statement announcing his action Dr. Garfield said tonight:

"State Fuel Administrators will retain the full authority heretofore conferred upon them to establish and enforce such restrictions and regulations as may be made necessary by coal conditions in their respective communities.

"Reports to the Fuel Administration as to coal and transportation conditions indicate a vast improvement as a result of the fuel restrictions, the railway embargoes, and the weather conditions. The change in the weather has been gradual enough to seem to insure the country against any immediate interference with the coal supply by flood conditions.

"The reports to the Fuel Administration show that both transportation and coal production are feeling the relieving effects of the coal restrictions imposed by the regulation of Jan. 17 and continued improvement is indicated. The co-operation of the Director General of Railroads through the authorization of embargoes has had the effect of aiding in meeting the necessities which prompted the order of Jan. 17.

"The order contemplated fuel restrictions on fourteen days during January, February, and March. The restrictions have been in effect eight days. Conditions today warrant the conclusion that with the continued enforcement of the preferential delivery of coal under Section 1 of the order of Jan. 17, and continued transportation improvement, further restrictions on the consumption of fuel will not be necessary."

McAdoo Discusses Conditions.

Mr. McAdoo, after consultation with Dr. Garfield, made this statement:

"I concur very heartily in Dr. Garfield's suspension of the Monday closing order, but it should not be assumed that there is no further necessity for economy in the use of coal. There are still six weeks of Winter weather ahead of us with the possibilities of snows and blizzards to interfere with railroad operations. Every pound of unnecessary traffic, therefore, that we can keep off the railroads during this period, and while the accummulated congestion of the past several months exists, will help to restore normal conditions that much more quickly. The general industrial activity of the country should be carried forward to the utmost limit that conditions will permit in order that production may not be unnecessarily disturbed and that labor may not unnecessarily be deprived of employment.

"The railroads are, of course, a fundamentally important factor in the situation, and the public may rest assured that they will be operated to the limit of their capacity and that every conceivable effort will be made to furnish the amount of transportation required to sustain the country's life and prosperity. With a few weeks of favorable weather I am sure that the railroads will be able to take care of their responsibility.

"I believe that there is every reason for encouragement and confidence about the future and that the resources of the country will prove sufficient to meet the great industrial and financial demands of the war. The prompt enactment by Congress of the necessary railroad legis-

19 British Ships Sunk; Increase of 4 in Week's Total

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Nineteen British merchantmen were sunk by mine or submarine in the last week, according to the Admiralty statement issued tonight.

Of these, thirteen were vessels of 1,600 tons or more, and six were under that tonnage. Three fishing craft were also sunk.

The arrivals during the week were 2,401 and the departures 2,274.

The loss to British shipping in the last week shows an increase of four over that of the previous week, which totaled fifteen vessels, ten over 1,600 tons.

ROME, Feb. 13.—Four Italian steamers of more than 1,600 tons were sunk by mine or submarine during the week ended Feb. 9, according to an official announcement today. During the previous week only one Italian steamer of less than 1,600 tons was lost.

PARIS, Feb. 13.—One French vessel of more than 1,600 tons and one of less than that tonnage were sunk by mine or submarine during the week ended Feb. 9.

URGE GOVERNMENT TO RUN SHIPYARDS

INVESTIGATIONS UNDER WAY

Test with "Inefficient" Plants Proposed—Unions Asked to Modify Rules.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Government operation of shipyards soon may follow Government control of railroads as a step necessary to speed up the war program and supply a solution of the problems involving capital and labor which have hampered construction to the point where a serious menace to the nation's plans admittedly has developed.

Agitation for action in that direction made itself heard soon after the Senate Commerce Committee began its investigation of the chaotic conditions at Hog Island. It gained in force today as a result of revelations concerning continued demands for wage increases and apparent indifference on the part of many employes.

It was reported in some quarters that certain shipyardds classified as "inefficient," which are now operated under private ownership, although engaged on none but Government contracts, might be first commandeered by the Government to test the effectiveness of Federal control. Apparently the Administration is concerned, and may adopt drastic methods.

It is frankly and almost universally admitted that some action along definite lines must be taken unless there is an immediate improvement in conditions. The Shipping Board has the power to commandeer the shipyards and assume absolute control of the industry, thus making it possible to deal directly with the workingmen and handle all phases of the shipbuilding program from the Government standpoint alone.

Advocates of the commandeering program have urged that the Government, with private capital practically eliminated from participation around the council tables, would be in a much stronger position to handle the problem of wage adjustment, tell the workingmen what was expected of them, and see to it that slackers were punished and the desired results accomplished. They feel that the attitude of labor would undergo a decided and wholesome change under such circumstances.

Investigations Under Way.

Developments within the next week or ten days probably will largely decide the policy which will be adopted. Thorough investigations are being made to determine definitely just how far employers and employes are co-operating in a patriotic endeavor to build ships and to what extent shirkers are to be found.

The fact that 5,000 men employed in Gloucester and Wilmington shipyards refused to work yesterday because double pay was not assured them, has been taken by some as evidence of the necessity of using a firm hand in correcting conditions which made possible such a situation at a time when the Government's greatest and most vital need was the rapid construction of ships.

The charge that many employes have failed to respond to the nation's call and especially that riveters have not worked to capacity because other less efficient men received equal pay is being made the subject of inquiry.

In this connection labor unions which have placed restrictions on the amount of work its members may do each day have been asked to withdraw them. That such rules are in effect, even in the present emergency, has been admitted. It has been estimated that skilled riveters are capable of driving an average of 350 rivets a day and there is a general belief that no such record has been kept up. Such a situation is looked upon as deplorable, under the existing circumstances, by some of the men who are trying to force a change of conditions.

The question of wages is involved in this phase of the problem and the advocates of Government operation of the yards feel that the Shipping Board would be in a much better position to deal with the labor element if it were in full charge of the work.

It has been stated that most of the recognized leaders of organized labor

OVERMAN BILL PUT INTO SHAPE FOR COMPROMISE

PUTS LIMIT ON ITS SCOPE

GAINS FAVOR IN CONGRESS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—As an outcome of the recent conferences between President Wilson and Senate leaders of both parties, Senator Overman's bill to give the President power in co-ordinating and reconstructing the Governmental war machinery is being toned down, and there is every prospect of a workable compromise between the President and leaders in Congress that will evolve a bill acceptable to all.

This was admitted today by Senator Overman, who is Chairman of the subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee engaged in recasting the measure.

Mr. Overman conferred today with his associates on the sub-committee, and changes were discussed to make the bill much less radical than it was when offered in the Senate last week. In the form offered by Senator Overman the measure, it was conceded, had no chance of being passed. The conferees expect, before they are through with it, to whip it into shape that will meet the approval of the majority in both houses.

A rough draft of the revised measure has already been made. One of the chief changes is to eliminate the power intended to be conferred upon the President to create any new bureaus or departments at will, or to substitute these for existing ones.

In its revised shape the bill has lost much of its phraseology. This, one member of the committee explained, was done to simplify it and make it easily understood.

To Reconstruct War Department.

The bill is to be framed so as to give the President power to reconstruct the War Department. The whole idea in the President's mind, it was said today by a Senator who had conferred with him, is to concentrate upon the readjustment of the machinery of the War Department. President Wilson, according to this Senator, is not opposed to the general scheme of a War Munitions Department, as embodied in the Munitions Directorship bill now before Congress, but he wants to work it out himself. The President believes he can evolve a system, the Senator said, that will be acceptable to the most ardent advocates of a change in the War Department.

The amended Overman measure is aimed to confer power upon the President to make any necessary changes toward coordinating War Department functions. But the Judiciary Committee will make the definition of these powers specific, instead of general, as they were in the original bill.

"We want to simplify the working of the bill," said Senator Overman. "When that is done, there will, I am confident, be little apposition to it. As a matter of fact the President has not intended to ask Congress for autocratic powers; he has only wanted to carry out ideas of reconstruction of the War Department. We intend reframing the bill so that he can proceed along that line.

"The President's idea, I believe, is not to disturb the navy in its sphere of purchases, and there are other departments that would not be touched. Critics of the War Department feel that a more centralized system ought to prevail. This bill will meet these suggestions.

"When we are through with it, I am quite sure we shall have a measure that can be supported by all the advocates of more efficiency in handling our war machinery. That is what we are working on now."

Drop War Cabinet Scheme.

A Republican member of the committee agreed with Senator Overman that the measure would be toned down so as to eliminate its features of general authority to the President to make drastic changes wherever he sees fit. This Senator agreed also with Senator Overman that there was every likelihood of the bill's being amended so as to win over a large majority in both houses.

As the result of the sub-committee's work on the Overman bill, based upon the conferences of leaders with the President in the last few days, sentiment has shifted in Congress in relation to the War Cabinet and Munitions measures. Both of these, it is now conceded, will be abandoned if the Overman bill is found to come up to the requirements. Senators who loudly insisted a week ago that the War Cabinet and Munitions bills must come to a vote were willing today to wait and see what character of measure the Overman committee brings out. While an effort may be made to force the War Cabinet and Munitions measures to a vote, there is every indication that their backers will not be averse to accepting the amended Overman bill as a compromise.

Senator Overman expects to have the bill ready for the Judiciary Committee early next week. In its new form, he said, it will be more comprehensive and appreciably shorter.

Vorwaerts Advises Berlin to Meet the Wilson Address

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 13.—The Socialist newspaper Vorwärts, commenting on President Wilson's address, says:

"The difficulties of concluding peace will never be overcome so long as each side does not perceive that it cannot overpower the other, and that each, inconsequence, must come to an understanding with the other. It must, therefore, be ascertained by a suitable attitude on Germany's part whether President Wilson's remark about there being no obstacle to an immediate discussion of peace is only a diplomatic move or really a redeeming word for mankind.

"The German answer ought to be no other than that we also are ready for a peace discussion forthwith."

The Cologne Gazette says:

"President Wilson shows that he is no longer willing to toe the line of the Entente policy of a stark negative. Also he has considerably watered his wine, although he is still unable to conquer a desire to saddle the military gentlemen in Germany with the blame for the sufferings of humanity. His present formula for the solution of peace questions is as vague as ever."

NEW TONNAGE LESS THAN HALF OF LOSS

TELLS OF ARMY'S BIG GAIN

Added 820,645 Men in Year—Supply of Wheat Greater Than a Year Ago.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer and Government leader in the House of Commons, replying in the House today to criticisms of the Government with respect to its home policy, said that in 1917 the National Service Department had put into the army 820,645 additional men and had placed in employment at home 731,000 men and 804,000 women.

Referring to the food production, he said that the cereals produced in England in 1917 amounted to 850,000 tons, and, in addition, the country had produced an extra 3,000,000 tons of potatoes.

England, said the Chancellor, was the only country involved in the war where there had not been a diminution in food production. A million additional acres were being put under the plow. During the year 800,000 acres more had been cultivated in England and 400,000 more in Scotland and Ireland. The total stocks of wheat in Great Britain at the end of December, 1917, exceeded those at the end of December, 1916, by one million quarters.

In 1917 there were built in Great Britain 1,163,474 tons of shipping, and 170,000 tons were obtained from abroad. The Chancellor explained that the Premier's estimate of ship construction was not realized because the Government had arranged to have a large quantity of tonnage built in America, but when America came into the war she preferred, as the British would have preferred, to take the tonnage herself, but the tonnage, he remarked, was there.

Emphasizing the value of the Shipping Controller's work, Mr. Bonar Law said that, in spite of the diminution in ships and in spite of the fact that Great Britain had lent 1,500,000 gross tons for the use of her allies, in September, October, and November the nation had actually imported the same amount as had been imported from February to April.

It had been suggested, said the Chancellor, that because America had entered the war Great Britain ought to spend less. America, he said, had given great help not only to Great Britain's allies, but also to Britain herself, for which Britain could not be too grateful. The pressure on the Allies, owing to the long continuance of the war, had made the burden very great, and he was glad to say that this country had been able to give not less assistance to some of her allies because of the assistance of America.

Bonar Law defended the present system of the Government, saying that the War Cabinet idea had been adopted by all the European belligerents. He repeated Premier Lloyd George's challenge that if the House of Commons did not have confidence in the Government it ought to get a Government which would carry on the work better than the present one. Until the House did this, he said, it was the duty of the members to avoid any criticism which would only be damaging.

"I have no more interest in this Prime Minister than I had in the last," said Mr. Bonar Law, "and I wish to see fair play for both. But I would rather see at the head of the Government a man who makes the mistake of being

NO FEAR OF THE OUTCOME

BRITISH FORCES ARE ALERT

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 12, (Delayed.)—The hope, freely expressed in well-informed circles here a few months ago, that the coming Spring and early Summer would be a decisive period, and that peace was probable before Autumn, or at least the end of the year, is gradually giving way to a more serious, but nowise pessimistic point of view. Unprejudiced Frenchmen admit that Germany's position is much improved by recent events in Russia and realize that it is unwise to pin hopes overmuch on the effects of the infiltration of Bolshevist theories into the Kaiser's Empire.

The latest news from inspired sources at the French front tends to modify considerably earlier sensational stories of a gigantic "hit or miss" German drive, whose failure—for the idea of success was scouted—would bring about the end of the war. A writer in the Petit Parisien today emphasizes in a detailed article the fact that, while a German offensive is almost certain, allied observations show that the enemy has spent infinite trouble on the organization of barbed wire and other defenses in view of possible counterattacks, thus indicating that the Germans have little hope of a possible rupture of the allied front, or even a big advance, such as they attempted at Verdun.

Opposing Forces Nearly Equal.

The truth is, the opposing forces are too nearly equal in France at this moment, and the defense systems are too thorough for either side to expect any material progress. Doubtless the Germans have been able to bring artillery from Russia, but certainly not enough to give them an appreciable preponderance, especially in view of their difficulties in the transport of munitions. As regards men, it is stated from an authorized military source in the Echo de Paris that reports of an immense increase in the number of Germans on the western front have been greatly exaggerated, and that in reality they have at the outside a total of 174 divisions (2,088,000 men, estimating the strength of a division at 12,000)—only twenty-one more (about 252,000 men) than at the time of the allied onslaught last Spring, when the enemy was frankly on the defensive—while against that the British numbers have increased, the French have been reorganized, and the Americans are already beginning to take their place in the line.

Thus, on the German side, the intention appears to be an aggressive, but not over-risky action, the Kaiser now building his hopes on the economical and commercial advantages to be drawn from the Russian peace, and on the effects of war weariness in the allied countries. For the Allies an offensive on a wide scale is for the moment out of the question, but they feel that things are likely to get easier, both from a military and economic point of view, as American help makes itself more felt, and are willing to play a waiting game until the American armies are fully in line.

Heartened by American Aid.

In France it can be strongly asserted that there is no danger of weakening. The reorganization of the army by Genéral Pétain has had an effect no less happy than the improvement of the civilian morale under Premier Clemenceau. The realization that the Americans are really in the war wholeheartedly, and the continuous arrival of such masses of American troops, have given the people something to hope for, and the improved arrangement of food distribution has put beyond doubt the possibility of their holding on as long as may be necessary. 2,000 Aviators Without Quarters at Mineola Are to be Lodged at Long Beach Until May 1

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BEACH, L. I., Feb. 13.—Officers of the Aviation Corps are arranging to take over most of the hotels, garages, and bathing houses to provide sleeping quarters for approximately 2,000 men who cannot be accommodated at the aviation field and camp at Mineola, L. I. Nearly all the places it is proposed to use are now closed, and it is understood that the War Department will have the use of them until May 1. The Nassau Hotel, at which some of the officers will have their headquarters as guests, will not be included in the arrangement. While it is the intention to quarter the men in these various places they are to have a central dining hall, under the direction of the corps.

The owners of Castles-by-the-Sea, where 1,000 men may be fed at one time, have offered the use of the kitchens for this purpose. Today Colonel L. C. Brown and other officers of the Aviation Corps made an inspection of the facilities that it is possible to obtain, after which he departed for Washington to make his report. Among the larger of the hotels and the number of soldiers who can be provided with sleeping quarters are: Hotel Abell, 150; A. J. K. Building, 150; Essex, 75, and Trouville, 200. It was said tonight that contracts with the owners of these and other places would probably be signed on Friday.

BRITISH PACIFISTS DEFEATED 159 TO 28 ON AMENDMENT OFFERED IN COMMONS; HERBERT SAMUEL JOINS GEORGE CRITICS

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced today in the House of Commons that action would be taken under the Defense of the Realm Act against Colonel Repington, the military correspondent of The Morning Post, for an article which appeared in The Post on Monday, dealing with the deliberations of the Versailles Council.

The article was submitted to the censor, who refused permission for publication. The article was afterward published in a different form without being submitted to the censor.

Mr. Bonar Law announced that action would also be taken against the editor of The Morning Post.

Asked if he was aware that Colonel Repington had written for three and a half years for The Times with "perfect impunity" and without action being taken against him, Mr. Bonar Law said:

"Assuming that this is criminal, every criminal lives a long time before he is convicted."

Lieut. Col. Repington resigned from The London Times on Jan. 21, after fifteen years' service as military correspondent, and joined The Morning Post. In an interview cabled to THE NEW YORK TIMES on Jan. 28 he said:

"I have to thank Lady Bathurst, proprietor, and Mr. H. A. Gwynne, editor, of The Morning Post, for the fact that I am no longer muzzled, and that I can now tell the British public and the American public the truth about our armies in France. They have done a public service in enabling me to tell the truth, and I may say that Mr. Gwynne risked his personal liberty in so doing. Under the Defense of the Realm Act you can lock a man up for nearly anything, and if our War Cabinet did not know that the case which I presented on Thursday (Jan. 24) was fairly stated I make no doubt that both Mr. Gwynne and myself would be in jail already."

CECIL SPRING-RICE DIES IN OTTAWA

Former Ambassador to the United States Expires Suddenly of Heart Attack.

SERVICE HERE JUST ENDED

He Had Been the Envoy to Washington Government More Than Four Years.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Thursday, Feb. 14.—Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, former British Ambassador to the United States, died this morning at 1 o'clock of heart failure at Government House.

Lady Spring-Rice and his son and daughter, Betty and Anthony, aged 11 and 9, respectively, were with him.

The Right Hon. Sir Cecil Arthur Spring-Rice had just been relieved as Ambassador to the United States, which post he had held since 1912. He succeeded Viscount Bryce. He had taken part in much of the work of diplomacy between the two Governments before and after the United States entered the war, and the heavy work had worn down his physical energies.

With the coming here of Lord Northcliffe as a special War Commissioner these duties were considerably lightened, although perhaps hardly as the Ambassador would have desired. There were denials from both sides of friction between himself and the new War Commissioner.

After Lord Northcliffe returned to England Sir Cecil's transfer home was announced. Soon afterward came the announcement that Earl Reading, Lord Chief Justice of England, would leave the Bench temporarily and come here as a Special Commissioner and Ambassador Extraordinary. Lord Reading arrived here only last Sunday.

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice had been in the diplomatic service for more than twenty years and first came to the United States as a Secretary of Legation in 1889. He returned to the country again during the administration of Theodore Roosevelt, but his mission was special, and he returned to England. It was said that his mission then concerned the relations between Japan and Russia.

In the course of his diplomatic career he had been assistant private secretary to Earl Granville, Secretary at Brussels, Washington, Tokio, Berlin, and Constantinople, and during those years of experience he had become one of the most trusted envoys of England. In 1900 he became Chargé d'Affaires, and later became the British Commissioner of Public Debt in Cairo. From 1903 to 1905 he was the First Secretary of the British Embassy in Petrograd, and was Minister and Consul General in Persia for the next two years. In 1908 he was Minister to Sweden, and he remained there for four years.

Spring-Rice was born in England Feb. 27, 1859, and was graduated from Balliol College, Oxford. He was a clerk in the War Department in Pall Mall before he entered the diplomatic service.

He leaves a widow and one son and one daughter.

Reichstag Resolution Now Shattered, Says Weser Zeitung.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Feb. 13.—The annexationist Weser Zeitung comments on the Kaiser's recent utterances with marked approval, saying that they must have reached Brest-Litovsk rapidly and frightened Trotzky. The paper concludes that the July 19 resolutions have now been shattered and that Germany is victorious in the east, as the eastern enemy has laid down his arms unconditionally.

The Zeitung says that Germany must face the enemy in the west with the idea of "victory and a German peace."

REPORT ATTEMPT TO OUST ROBERTSON

COMMONS FULL OF RUMORS

Hears Robertson May Take a New and High Position

LONDON, Feb. 13.—The Central News says that although General Sir William Robertson, Chief of the Imperial Staff at Army Headquarters, has neither been dismissed nor has resigned, he may vacate his post at an early date and take a position of high influence, if he cares to do so.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Rumors of a sensational character circulated in the lobbies of Parliament last evening in connection with the debate in Commons.

The lobby correspondent of The Daily News says:

"Whatever the facts may be, those in high place in the House of Commons believe that on Monday night the Government put pressure on General Robertson to induce him to resign, and that this was done in order that eventually General Wilson might take his place; that General Robertson as Chief of the Imperial Staff held it to be his duty to continue in his post unless removed from it, and that the Government in the early part of yesterday were considering whether they should of their own act remove him from his post.

"If it was really the intention of the Government to remove Robertson, Lloyd George's speech has now made the matter more difficult; for there is no question of giving information to the enemy, since if such a change took place it would be officially announced in due course to all the world, just as was the retirement of Admiral Jellicoe."

The Daily News editorial says:

"The House of Commons, awake at last to the heavy responsibility resting upon it, will insist on knowing the truth. It will insist on knowing to whose hands the fate of the British Army is committed. There can be no faltering with a subect of such overshadowing concern. It it is suggested that, in view of the fait accompli, any alteration will embarrass us with our allies, we reply that there will be much graver embarrassments if Parliament does not act with promptitude and decision; and if it is suggested, as Mr. Lloyd George suggested, that insistence on the elementary functions of Parliament means a change of Government, we are bound to say that, much as we desire to avoid another Ministerial crisis, there are interests that transcend all questions of machinery. This is one of them, and it is for Parliament to make it clear, come what may, that this country is governed from Westminster and not from Versailles."

The Daily Chronicle's Parliamentary correspondent writes:

"Tonight the political atmosphere is decidedly agitated. There are rumors of military resignations. The announcement is made of a Ministerial crisis. I cannot find that there is a solid foundation for them. It is, however, significant that the Prime Minister twice in his speech made reference to a possible change of administration. After arguing that some grave secret decisions must be left to the Government of the day he went on to say that if the House

WAR COUNCIL A TARGET

BALFOUR BACKS PREMIER

LEAGUE OF PEACE IN MIND

Lord Hugh Cecil Says It Is Being Considered—Samuel Charges Failures at Home.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—The House of Commons today rejected an amendment to the address in response to the speech from the Throne, proposed by Richard Holt, Radical, and expressing regret that "in accordance with the decisions of the Supreme War Council at Versailles, prosecution of the military effort is to be the only immediate task of the Government." The amendment was rejected by a vote of 159 to 28. The minority was composed mainly of pacifists.

Lord Hugh Cecil had declared in the course of the debate that the adoption of the amendment would involve the resignation of the Government.

Mr. Holt, in moving his amendment, asked the Government whether Mr. Wilson's four propositions as a basis of reconstruction represented the policy of the British Government and its European Allies.

If the answer to this question was in the affirmative, he asserted, it was the duty of the Government to reassemble the conference at Versailles or elsewhere and to make a clear and specific announcement jointly and separately to that effect. That would go a long way toward shortening the terrible trials confronting Europe.

Several members spoke in support of Mr. Holt's views, and then Arthur J. Balfour, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, rose.

Balfour Supports Premier's Views.

Mr. Balfour said that he felt bound to say that the conclusion the Premier and the Versailles Council had reached was a correct one, and that no glimmer of peace dawning on the horizon was to be derived from the Hertling and Czernin speeches. Had anybody, he asked, succeeded in extracting from the more pacific of the two speeches anything that might be regarded as satisfaction of the allied war aims?

A Member—President Wilson did.

Mr. Balfour, continuing, admitted that President Wilson noted a more tender tone and a softer atmosphere in Count Czernin's statements.

"President Wilson was amply justified," Mr. Balfour said, "in dwelling on the difference in tone, but when you leave the tone and come to formulated definite propositions you will not find them in Count Czernin's speech, and, so far as I am aware, President Wilson did not profess to find them."

It was a misunderstanding, Mr. Balfour said, to assume that the Versailles council had to deal with diplomatic and political issues; its real business was military.

Mr. Balfour argued that three definite speeches by President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George early this year made clear the aims of the Allies, but that even Count Czernin was not prepared to accept any of President Wilson's important aims.

Says Teutons Banged the Door.

"It is not the Government's view," Mr. Balfour continued, "that because the Versailles conference referred only to the prosecution of the war that no efforts have been made by belligerent countries to come to terms. The view of the Government is that the attitude of the Central Powers shows that for the moment diplomacy is entirely out of court.

"It was the Central Powers who banged the door, and by the mouth of the Chancellor and the Kaiser proved that they are as far removed as three years ago from accepting the ideals to which President Wilson has given classical expression, and which represent the common view of America and Great Britain and their allies.

"The Central Powers have abundantly shown that they do not mean to come to terms. At any rate Germany has shown it. The difference in tone of von Hertling and Czernin might show that Austria is more nearly in a reasonable frame of mind than her all-powerful ally, but the most miscroscopic and friendly investigation of von Hertling's speech shows not the least symptoms that the end of militarism in Germany is near. Their successes, so little due to fighting on the eastern front, have at once shown what has been throughout the true German militaristic spirit.

"Add to our territory, secure our military extension by acquiring a controlling influence over this or that great area, make our borders secure by getting this or that alien population under our control—that was the German military policy three years ago and it is the German policy, so far as I understand von Hertling and the Kaiser, at the present hour.

"How much that policy has behind it the true spirit of the German nation I cannot say, but so far as outward marks and the declarations of responsible statesmen go, I see not a hair's breadth of variation from their old ambitions of getting a German peace, and every one knows that a German peace has one meaning alone, namely, a peace that would make every other nation subservient to Germany."

Herbert Samuel Criticises.

Discussion of foreign and military affairs had been dropped temporarily in the House for consideration of the administration of the Government at home. Herbert Samuel, formerly Secretary of State for Home Affairs, made the opening speech on this subject.

Regarding man power he said that Great Britain stood in virtually the same position as in December, 1910. With respect to food the Government had a somewhat better record, but, he asserted, the increased production of food was only 4 per cent. net, of which 3 per cent. related to Ireland.

The situation as to food control, he said, was very far from satisfactory, and everyone knew of the extreme shortage of meat, butter, margarine and other products. Further, he charged that the promises of the Premier as to shipbuilding in 1917 did not square with the results. There was only half of the increase estimated by the Shipping Controller, and only one-third of that estimated by the Premier.

Similarly the production of ironstone, on which the steel supplies depended, had increased in the first four weeks of this year by only 84,000 tons, which would be equivalent to 1,000,000 tons for the year, instead of the 4,000,000 tons promised by the Premier.

Another complaint voiced by Mr. Samuel had to do with the production of beer. The actual production, he said, had been 15,500,000 barrels, whereas the Premier had said it would be reduced to 10,000,000 barrels.

The last subject on which he wished to criticize the policy of the Government, he said, was finance. In the last fourteen months there had been an increase in the daily national expenditure of £2,000,000, or an increase of 40 per cent.

Wants a Smaller War Council.

Mr. Samuel said it was clear that the present system of the Government was not working to the best advantage. Parliament, he said, had before it the spectacle of six weary men exhausted with labor endeavoring every day to catch up with the ever-accumulating arrears of work. After fourteen months it could not be said that the War Cabinet had proved successful. He suggested a small council, consisting of the heads of the departments concerned with the conduct of the war, and a Home Council, consisting of the heads of the departments concerned with home administration.

He gave the fullest support to the war aims as stated by the Premier to the Labor Conference, and said it was because he cared intensely about winning the war that he had spoken today.

Lord Robert Cecil announced that the Government was giving great attention to a "League of Nations." He added that he himself had prepared a scheme for it.

VERSAILLES STATEMENT DUE?

Belief That Light Will Be Thrown on War Council's Decisions.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—When the House of Commons met this afternoon the prevalent opinion in the lobbies was that last night's proceedings presented many deplorable aspects from a national point of view. It was also thought that the attitude which some papers had taken this morning was far from improving matters. Moderate opinion had been almost equally antagonized by the extremist sections of the press on both sides. The Daily News denunciations of Lloyd George and The Daily Mail's efforts to pillory Asquith as a pacifist were alike deplored as injurious to national unity, more than ever essential at a critical time like the present.

What are called "demonstrations" in the House of Commons are as a rule manifestations which admit of variable description. Just as beauty is in the eye of the beholder, so the "cheers" which the House permits itself can frequently be colored by an observer according to his fancy.

Among independent spectators there is no question that in the incident between Lloyd George and Asquith the sympathy of the House was with the latter, and that on the whole the Prime Minister's speech did not exercise the customary effect of his oratory. Many members expressed the feeling that in these days descriptive reports of Parliamentary proceedings, which were introduced by Lord Northcliffe, (then Alfred Harmsworth,) should be prohibited when advantage was taken of them to convey to the public an impression directly at discord with the facts.

Suspicions of a too close understanding between members of the Government or their secretaries and newspapers which were voiced by several speakers last night tended to be strengthened by the attitude taken by a part of the press today.

These considerations played no important part in creating the atmosphere of the House on its meeting today, but the main question was, of course, what would be the outcome of the continued debate on the address. There is no general desire among those who may be classed as Lloyd George's opponents —unless it be among the out-and-out militarists—to find themselves arrayed with the Asquith Liberals and the peace-by-negotiations group to turn the Government out of office; and late in the afternoon the preponderant opinion was that, skillfully handled, tonight's debate might turn out to the advantage of the Government.

Pacifists Aid Premier to Score.

Two amendments to the address, drawn up on more or less pacifist lines, can be made good Government capital, and there is some expectation that the militarists will be appeased by a statement regarding the status of soldiers. In fact, an official announcement of high importance from this point of view is looked for in some well informed quarters.

From what is known of the Versailles decisions, the limits to which the Government could go in the way of enlarging the functions of the War Council with the full approval of Parliament have not been exceeded, and, in regard to the question of personalities, arrangements which would admit of an entirely satisfactory solution of all the problems involved are and were yesterday in process of devlopment.

It was largely because these arrangements were not complete yesterday that the Prime Minister was unable to give to Mr. Asquith's questions an answer which, in the opinion of people with the best information, would have been regarded as satisfactory.

BRITISH POLITICAL ROW AS SEEN FROM PARIS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 13.—President Wilson's latest statement has been splendidly received everywhere in Europe for its firm spirit and tone and its inspiring promise of American steadfastness. It is timed to rally the European Allies to present a solid front to Germany, both military and political. Its effect would be even more stimulating but for the depressing factional quarrel going on in England.

Alleged interference with the military leaders is the ostensible basis of the attack on the Lloyd George Government at the moment when it is beset by the unrest of the Labor Party. All those with inside information know that there is not the slightest substance in the charge of pernicious political interference with the military. Unfortunately, however, the effort to secure the nearest possible approach to unity of control, so that the allied resources may be used effectively against an enemy thoroughly organized and unified, has been susceptible of distortion. It is natural in wartime for people to make heroes of military leaders, and the great popularity of Haig and Robertson in England has been availed of by the anti-George conspirators.

Self constituted champions have used these names to create suspicion and distrust of the civil government, and the latter's exercise of its proper functions and paramount authority has been made to appear as scheming against the army heads. Agents were sent to Paris to pick flaws in the work of the Versailles Council, and their mischief making reports have been used for the utter misconstruction, in Parliament and a portion of the press, of the work done and the conclusions arrived at by that body.

It is pointed out that these attempts would have no standing but for the unwisdom of the Premier himself in officially associating journalistic supporters, first Northcliffe and recently Beaverbrook, with his Government. In order to valuable these men must preserve their integrity and independence as editors, for their active political association destroys their journalistic usefulness and leads to such exhibitions as the country is now being treated to.

Many here think that the best thing that could happen, now that matters have gone so far, would be for Lloyd George to lay the whole situation frankly before the country from the beginning, including the proceedings of the last Versailles council. Perhaps only such radical action will restore in England the confidence which the sinister journalistic propaganda has undermined. It would be fortunate if the result were equally to strengthen the Premier's hold and put journalism back in its place.

In England official activities are directly controlled by public opinion, which in turn draws its information and inspiration from the press. Its newspaper equilibrium could be re-established by the return to Fleet Street of the editors officially identified with the Government. The confusion which has been prevailing would disappear and conditions would return to normal.

MORNING POST STILL WARS ON PREMIER

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Feb. 14.—The Morning Post in an editorial headed "Not Peace But a Sword," rejects the suggestion of the Northcliffe press that the demonstration in the House of Commons on Tuesday was "a pacifist demonstration." It says:

"The House of Commons showed its displeasure with the Prime Minister because the Prime Minister had been using methods which were neither British nor well calculated to win the war. Lloyd George has made a mistake. He thought he could calculate upon personal fidelity in whatever course he took.

"Not once but many times he has flouted public opinion and all right principles of government. When the question of man power was urgent last Autumn he neglected it. There he showed the lack of British courage. Then he allowed himself to attack the chiefs of the army and he allowed them to be attacked by his supporters in the press. There he showed lack of British fairness.

"If the army chiefs were at fault he had a simple course. He could replace them by better men. He preferred to undermine their power and their authority. He surrounded himself with sycophants and mistook their interested applause for the voice of the nation. He mistook the press for the public and Walton Heath for England.

"That is why, and not from any desire for peace, there was a demonstration in the House of Commons. It was a warning and a rebuke.

"Lloyd George may take it in two ways. He may go on trying to silence honest criticism and seeking to turn disinterested candor into interested adulation. He may banish Kent and Cordelia and advance Regan and Goneril to place and power. Such policy may delay but will not avert retribution. He may take the better course and reconcile himself with the nation by getting rid of his evil counsellors and supporting his trusted servants.

"The Prime Minister has been given not one but many chances. The nation has been patient with him. Democracy practices an incorrigible belief against all experience that a silk purse may be manufactured out of the most unpromising materials. But Lloyd George makes a mistake if he considers that patience to be without limit and if he regards himself as indispensable. That mistake was made before, and let him reflect that if the House of Commons has made this demonstration against him, it is not because it desires his fall. On the contrary, if there is one thing the House desires, it is a stable Government. It has supported him with a patience which we might fairly describe as magnificent and pathetic. It has supported him because it hoped much from his energy and from his determination."

COLLUSION, SAYS CURZON.

He Insists Joint Utterances Were Framed to Divide the Allies.

LONDON, Feb. 12, (Delayed.)—The recent speeches of Count von Hertling and Count Czernin were a collusive performance arranged by the two statesmen, intended to drive a wedge between the Allies rather than to bring about peace, said Earl Curzon, Government leader in the House of Lords, in a debate today on the address to the Throne. No attempt, he said, had been made to meet the minimum demands of the Allies. He added:

"The most critical times that have ever confronted this country are in front of us. But I do not think the position is at all dangerous, and our military advisers do not think it is. At the same time, we shall have to put every ounce of effort into the common cause. If we do that, I am confident we will win and thus save civilization."

PARIS SEES NO PEACE OPENING.

PARIS, Feb. 13.—In the opinion of the Paris press the situation has been cleared by President Wilson's address to Congress concerning the German military autocracy, taken in conjunction with the recent statement of Emperor William that Germany's enemies must recognize her as victorious. The Emperor's utterances are accepted as expressing the real sentiments of the dominant class in Germany, and the conclusion is drawn that there must be implacable warfare until German militarism is finally defeated.

"President Wilson's thesis implies war to the hilt and to an end that is still far from view," says the Figaro. "The war will be ended either according to the views of Emperor William, by unanimous submission to Germany, or by the wrecking of German militarism."

PERSHING REQUESTS MORE CHAPLAINS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—General Pershing has recommended to the War Department that the number of Chaplains in the army be increased for the war to an average of three for each regiment, with an additional number assigned in order to be available for such detached duty as may be required. His cablegram, made public tonight, reads:

"In the fulfillment of its duty to the nation much is expected of our army and nothing should be left undone that will help in keeping it in the highest state of efficiency. I believe the personnel of the army has never been equaled and the conduct has been excellent, but to overcome entirely the conditions found here requires fortitude born of great courage and lofty spiritual ideas. Counting myself responsible for the welfare of our men in every respect, it is my desire to surround them with the best influence possible. In the fulfillment of this solemn trust it seems wise to request the aid of the churches at home.

"To this end it is recommended that the number of chaplains in the army be increased for the war to an average of three per regiment, with assimilated rank of Major and Captain in due proportion, and that a number be assigned in order to be available for such detached duty as may be required. Men selected should be of the highest character, with reputations well established as sensible, practical, active ministers or workers accustomed to dealing with young men. They should be in vigorous health, as their services will be needed under most trying circumstances. Appointees should, of course, be subject to discharges for inefficiency like other officers of the National Army.

"It is my purpose to give the Chaplains' Corps throughout these forces a definite and responsible status and to outline, direct, and enlarge their work into co-operative and useful aid to the troops."

NEXT DRAFT LIKELY IN MAY OR JUNE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—While the House was debating the "Alien Slacker" bill today, Chairman Flood of the Foreign Affairs Committee, who opposed it as the Administration's representative, declared that the next draft was not likely to be operative before May or June.

His statement was made to reassure members who said they feared that, unless Congress took the matter in its own hands, action would lag until it would be too late to include the nationals of foreign countries in the next call.

Mr. Flood did not give the source of his information. It coincides, however, with other information which has come to the Capitol recently. Chairman Dent of the Military Affairs Committee was on the floor, aiding Mr. Flood in his fight. He did not deny the statement.

On this representation the House, which had manifested strongly its determination to pass the "Alien Slacker" bill, agreed to postpone it two weeks. Chairman Flood said it was his opinion that by that time the State Department would have completed its diplomatic negotiations looking to the same end. He also said that if diplomacy had not succeeded by that time he would cease his objection to the measure, which now has been postponed several times.

Unanimous consent was given by the House to take the bill up again two weeks from today and to hold it before the House to the exclusion of all other business until finally disposed of.

Secretary Lansing sent a letter to Representative Burnett of Alabama, author of the bill, protesting that action by Congress was embarrassing him in his diplomatic negotiations. Despite this, however, it seemed certain that, until Mr. Flood's assurance, the House would override the Secretary's wish.

To every argument against the measure, Representative Burnett replied that they all came to one result—that "some members of Congress were willing to have American boys go to war while foreigners stayed at home and took their jobs."

Mr. Flood said that the State Department's negotiations would take men up to 40 or 45 years of age, as the aliens are to be selected under the conditions which prevail in their home countries.

NEED $1,000,000,000 FROM UNITED STATES

Britain, France, and Italy Make Known Requirements for February and March.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—The Interally Council on War Purchases and Finance has concluded its session for February, it is announced officially. General Bliss, Chief of Staff of the American Army, attended the meetings.

Programs of requirements for February and March presented by the Governments of Great Britain, France, and Italy involved requests for credits from the United States Treasury of about one billion dollars.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—An additional $50,000,000 was placed to the credit of Italy today by Secretary McAdoo, bringing the total of American loans to that country to $550,000,000 and the total of American credits to the allied nations to $4,734,400,000.

BOLSHEVIST PEACE CHEERS AUSTRIANS

FOOD ANXIOUSLY AWAITED

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 13.—Flags are flying everywhere in Austria, according to advices from Vienna, and thanksgiving services are being arranged to celebrate the news of Trotzky's declaration that the war between the Central Powers and Russia is ended.

The Vienna official news agency ascribes the reversal in the attitude of the Russian Government to the fact that peace was concluded between the Central Powers and Ukraine, and expresses the conviction that as a result of this peace there will be a strong reaction on the war in the west. The agency adds:

"The termination of the war is at last obtained by the diplomacy of the Central Powers, and there is no need to be discouraged by the form chosen by Russia for the announcement of peace."

Referring to the economic agreements, the Austrian papers indicate that, while exaggerated hopes are not justified, it may be expected that of a two years' harvest, at the least, which could not be exported from Ukraine, there are still considerable stocks, and that about one million tons will be available. In this connection, however, the papers point out the difficulties of transport, which must first be reckoned with.

GERMAN LEADERS DISCUSS NEW 'PEACE'

Press, Still at Sea Over Trotzky's Move, Doubts War Has Ended.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 13.—Political conferences are again the order of the day in Germany. At these gatherings Trotzky's latest move naturally has been the subject of discussion. Today Chancellor von Hertling and Foreign Minister Kühlmann are conferring with Hindenburg and Ludendorff at Imperial Headquarters, and an exchange of views is proceeding actively between Berlin and Vienna.

Berlin received the first news of Trotzky's declaration with even more flagwaving and rejoicing than welcomed the intimation of peace with Ukraine, but this mirth was soon seen to be premature and even yet the German press is not by any means clear as to the actual situation which has arisen.

The leading articles present a picture of great mental confusion. Some papers hold to their first enthusiasm and believe war in the east is over. Others are of the opinion that nothing has been altered. Die Post, a militarist organ, believes Trotzky has set German diplomacy a very difficult problem to solve, and the Dusseldorf Nachrichten pleads for clear thinking regarding the new situation. Trotzky's declaration, it proceeds, "must not be regarded as a declaration of peace. There is no reason to rejoice and talk of an end of war in the East."

Opinions differ on the point whether the Brest-Litovsk conference is at an end and whether the armistice still holds good. The Hamburger Nachrichten takes the extreme view and maintains that the Bolshevist policy is to break off the peace negotiations, dissolve the Russian army and "create a Socialist army of desperadoes to bring about a European revolution."

German Muddle Amuses Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—The withdrawal of Russia from the war and the signing of a definite treaty of peace between Austria and those claiming to represent the Russian Province of Ukraine have not impressed the United States Government as causes for profound pessimism.

From their cart-before-the-horse diplomacy, the Bolsheviki have placed the German Government in a peculiar position, and the capital found cause for chuckling today in the head lines in THE NEW YORK TIMES reading, "Trotzky's Peace Leaves Germans Bewildered —Confess They Don't Know What to Do With It, Now They Have it—Papers Have Misgivings." These headlines exactly expressed the situation, according to close observers who gained amusement in contemplating the effect upon the ordered German mind of Russia's sudden abandonment of peace exchanges.

In the absence of a definitive peace treaty any forward move by the German troops in Russian territory or any effort on the part of the German Government to exploit Russia to obtain food and other needed supplies will be likely to turn the situation topsy-turvey again, with perhaps embarrasing results to the powers that be at Berlin. Even the continued occupation of Russian territory by German troops may bring cause for concern to the Prussian autocracy.

BULGARIAN IDEA OF PEACE WITH RUMANIA

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 13.—D. Rizow, Bulgarian Minister to Germany, in an interview published by the Lokal-Anzeiger of Berlin, a copy of which has been received here, is quoted as having said:

"If Rumania takes Bessarabia and leaves the Dobrudja to Bulgaria, we shall be pleased. Our Government would accept the deal. This solution historically would be justified, and the Central Powers would raise no objection to it, as it would contribute to the restoration of tranquillity in the Balkans."

Other Berlin papers received here announce that Dr. von Kühlmann, the German Foreign Minister, and M. Radoslavoff, the Bulgarian Premier, arrived in Berlin from Brest-Litovsk Tuesday, and that Count Czernin, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, was expected to reach Vienna today.

Field Marshal von Mackensen, says a Berlin semi-official telegram, is negotiating with the Rumanian Army command regarding the continuation of the armistice. It is necessary to clear up the armistice question, says the message, owing to the present relations between the Ukraine and Rumania. It denies that Germany has issued any ultimatum to Rumania.

The Berlin Tageblatt says an answer was requested by this evening to a demand on Rumania by the Central Powers to enter upon peace negotiations. The paper says the demand did not take the form of an ultimatum with an inherent threat.

Accuse Army Officer of Theft.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Feb. 13.—Lieutenant Robert H. Hall of the 48th United States Infantry was arrested today on charges of deserting and of embezzling $7,000 in express money orders. Hall denied the embezzlement charge, and the police said he refused to discuss the desertion accusation. His arrest followed advices from the Sheriff of Little Rock, where Hall had been stationed.

have shown a tendency to co-operate with the Government, as represented by the Shipping Board and its Labor Adjustment Commission, and that this dealing might be made much more effective if there were no other elements involved.

Various plans have been suggested to eradicate indifference on the part of workingmen and avoid further discontent while wage discussions were in progress, by the establishment of a definite Government policy from which there could be no turning.

One labor leader has suggested also that better results might be obtained by having organized labor turn out ships to be known as "union ships" in order to demonstrate to the world what organized labor could do in the face of a grave emergency. This plan has not reached more than the theory stage as wage disputes and periods of unrest and discontent have rendered it almost impossible to obtain concerted action.

Building at 132 Yards.

There are 132 shipyards in the country engaged on work for the United States Shipping Board, and there has been a tendency to shy from the task of Government operation on so large a scale, especially as the present management of many of the yards was considered efficient. In face of the present crisis, however, there is a distinct evidence of a growing belief that half way measures will not solve the problem in time unless there is the most radical reform in many directions.

It is known at least that the matter has received the most serious consideration at meetings of officials delegated to produce ships and transport men and supplies to Europe. Some have argued that the Government operation of shipyards was a natural sequence of Government control of railroads, inasmuch as transportation and shipping are closely affiliated and appear as the two greatest war problems.

The argument has been further put forward that inasmuch as the Government is paying a substantial part of the increases granted to workmen, despite the fact that the yards are operated as private enterprises handling Government contracts, the Shipping Board should take complete control, make provisions for reasonable profits to the yard owners on their investment, and handle the whole situation as a Government enterprise.

The decision as to the course which must be pursued will be made as a result of further conferences and will be based upon the facts brought out by investigations now in progress and the prospect for more effective co-operation in all directions.

URGES STRONG METHODS FOR SHIPYARD SPIES

Dr. Eaton Tells Port Newark Foremen to Turn Bombs on Those Who Use Them.

The Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church, who has a year's leave of absence to conduct a campaign among shipyard workers to speed up shipbuilding, was cheered last night by 300 foremen at the Submarine Boat Corporation's yard at Port Newark when he told them what to do with spies they might find among their subordinates.

"You'll find them here," he said. "They'll wait till your back is turned, then they'll tell the men: 'Don't pay any attention to him. Don't do any more work than you have to.' They'll whisper behind your back and in a hundred ways impede the work. When you find such a man, don't wait, don't say to him, 'Come, let's talk this over.' Don't ask him to have tea; knock his block.

"And when he comes sneaking around with a bomb don't say, 'Let us pray,' but take him out there on the marsh and tie him down and place the bomb on his chest. Light it and stand off and watch him blow to his Kaiser—to hell. Be regular he-men. Work whether the boss is around or not. The destiny of the country is in your hands. Every man in a shipyard is a member of the army, every shipyard is a fortress of freedom, every rivet a nail in the Kaiser's coffin.

"I was born in a shipyard and the first smell I can remember is of hot tar and oakum. Our greatest weakness nowadays is our lack of a sense of moral obligation; the soul of man has gone astray. Men who apply for work ask 'Is the work hard?' 'How long will it last?'

"What is the matter with you? Do a day's work because you are men. There is no hope for democracy till the rich man and the poor man give all they have, their very best."

Dr. Eaton's talk was greeted with frequent applause and a great show of enthusiasm by the men. The meeting was arranged by the National Service Section, of the United States Shipping Board of which Dr. Eaton is Chairman. The foremen are expected to instill patriotism in the workmen in the words of Dr. Eaton, "to teach them, inspire them, be patient with them and show them their duty."

SAYS GOVERNMENT IGNORED WORKERS

Labor Leader Guerin Here to Tell Striking Shipyard Carpenters About Conditions.

T. M. Guerin, member of the General Executive Board of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, whose office is in Indianapolis, has arrived in this city to tell the members of the union, including those now on strike at five of the Staten Island shipyards, of the efforts the brotherhood has made for what he terms at least "an even break" with the United States Shipping Board. His coming was not because of the present strike, but because the officials of the union believe the workers should know just what the union has been doing to help the Government and how these offers were received.

The union men received word yesterday from their President, William L. Hutcheson, that Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board, through V. Everit Macy, Chairman of the Labor Adjustment Committee, had refused to deal with the strikers here unless the union officers signed an agreement to abide by whatever decisions the board might make. This, it was declared, the union would not do. It is said President Wilson is to be asked to give the matter personal consideration.

What has angered Mr. Guerin and other union officials is the insinuation from Washington that union labor members are industrial slackers. He says skilled workers cannot get work, while various boards are declaring there is a labor shortage. He complains that labor has not had proper representation in Government war activities.

"Early in the war," said Mr. Guerin, "this organization wired Washington, offering the services of 300,000 skilled workers. It also placed at the disposal of the country its 200 business agents and its 4,400 local secretaries. No official of the Government has asked us to furnish a single man.

"We offered our services to the Shipping Board. But the board got into a fight over steel or wooden ships, and nothing came of the offer."

In connection with the recent negotiations, Mr. Guerin said Mr. Blackman of the Labor Department of the Shipping Board quoted Chairman Hurley as saying with reference to the union men: "Let them do their worst."

"What we desire is a uniform wage," said Mr. Guerin, "so that workers will be paid the same in every yard. This will allow the shifting of skilled men to where they are most needed."

None of the men on strike went back to work yesterday. Many appeared in the vicinity of the shipyards, but they did not interfere with the workers. No attempt has been made to engage other men, as the companies are awaiting the outcome of negotiations in Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Edward N. Hurley, Chairman of the United States Shipping Board, has not served an ultimatum, either directly or through V. Everitt Macy, on President Hutcheson of the Carpenters' Union. It was denied officially also that Mr. Hurley had used the words "Let them do their worst" in any message sent from Washington and that no one had been authorized to so picture his attitude.

The Labor Adjustment Committee has been in session here in an effort to settle the differences. The strikers are being urged to return to their work and the Adjustment Committee is endeavoring to arrive at an equitable solution. Labor union leaders have been asked to co-operate in order that there may not be a moment's delay in the shipbuilding program because of the grievances, supposed or real, of the men.

It is understood that a decision to grant demands, without consideration of the questions involved, has not been reached. As far as could be learned tonight, there has been no definite suspension of negotiations.

PLANS SHIPWORKERS' AID.

Jersey Body Will Take Up Transportation Problems.

Special to The New York Times.

KEARNY, N. J., Feb. 13.—Officials of the West Hudson towns interested in the housing of the 30,000 mechanics and others who will soon be employed at the various new plants on the Kearny Meadows, at a meeting here tonight, formed the West Hudson Housing Association, with Gabriel B. Reid as President and Sol Friedman, Secretary. R. F. Dalzell, representative of the United States Shipping Board, urged the association to make a drive for better transportation facilities so that the employes will be able to get to their places of work without inconvenience.

President Reid named a committee on ways and means to interest capitalists in a proposition to purchase land build homes and try to aid the transportation problem. It was suggested that a new roadway be constructed across the meadows connecting with the Lincoln Highway, over which tracks be laid and trolley cars operated.

Fifty Shipways at Hog Island.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 13.—Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles, "speeder up" of the Government shipbuilding plants, today authorized the construction of the full fifty ways at Hog Island, in accordance with the original plans. The last of these ways, he announced, would be ready for keels in ninety-three days, which would place the completion of the assembling section of the yard at May 17.

is not satisfied, then, 'in God's name, change the Government.'"

The Times in its political notes says:

"It is generally recognized that yesterday's debates in Parliament marked a definite change in the relation of the Government and the Opposition. The temper of Mr. Asquith's speech was a better indication than its careful phrasing. So was the attempt to embarrass the Government by refusing notice of questions to be raised. So, above all, was the round of cheering from the little "pacifist" group which greeted Mr. Asquith's interventions.

"Rightly or wrongly, the leader of the Opposition was hailed in the House as the rising hope of a peace party which apparently hopes to reinforce its numbers under cover of the cry to 'support the soldiers.'"

The Daily Mail editorial says:

"Asquith's wabbling speech was the occasion of an elaborately organized demonstration by its little clique of supporters and by the pacifists, who gave him one of those worked-up ovations which used to delight their souls in time of peace. Their enthusiasm was doubtless aroused by the statement made last Saturday in the leading pacifist journal that the time has come for a change of Government, and that Lord Lansdowne, Asquith, and Henderson are ready to form a new Ministry. Every one knows the meaning of this suggestion, coming from such a quarter."

To Re-establish War Secretary's Position.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Feb. 14.—The Chronicle's Parliamentary correspondent writes this morning:

"Rumor has been busy this week with the names of Sir William Robertson and Sir Henry Wilson. The idea prevailed that an exchange of offices might be effected between them, Sir William to be the principal representative of this country on the Supreme War Council at Versailles and Sir Henry to succeed himself as Chief of the Imperial General Staff.

"If any idea of that kind was at any time seriously entertained, it has now been abandoned. Robertson remains chief of the General Staff, with the full approval and confidence of the War Cabinet Wilson is to continue to be principal representative at Versailles—a position for which he is peculiarly well qualified.

"It is understood that certain changes in the Order in Council which recreated the office of Chief of the Imperial General Staff in October, 1915, are impending. These changes in no way reflect on Robertson. They have become necessary in order to re-establish the old constitutional position of the supremacy of the Secretary of State for War as representative of the civil power."

lation and the war finance legislation will be extremely helpful. There is no ground for pessimism. We have only to clench our teeth, stand together, and ultimate victory is certain."

Lessened Railroad Congestion.

Figures made public today showed that from Jan. 22 to Feb. 12 the number of eastbound loads held up by congested conditions on four railroads, the New York Central, Erie, Baltimore & Ohio, and Pennsylvania was reduced from 26,853 to 13,768, or practically cut in half.

These cars represent the loads above normal for the days given, or, in other words, the number of cars on the lines in addition to the cars which were being moved. The following table shows the results attained by individual lines:

	Jan. 22.	Feb. 12.
Erie	5,552	[illegible]
Baltimore & Ohio	8,450	[illegible]
Pennsylvania, East	5,576	2,527
Total	26,853	13,768

One emergency measure of the railroad administration contributing to the faster movement of coal in the last few days is the speeding up of repairs on locomotives. The output of many repair shops and roundhouses in the East, it is estimated, has been doubled.

WILL FREE NEW YORK FROM CLOSING RULES

Administrators Have Discretionary Power, but Expect to Make No Further Restrictions.

The National Fuel Administration in suspending yesterday the Monday closing order gave State Administrators power to restore the order in their several jurisdictions if circumstances seemed to require it. In this city it is probable that no further restrictions will be placed on industries, and that New York has seen the last of the workless Mondays.

The milder weather has expedited the movement of coal from the mines to tidewater and has increased the amount of anthracite coming to New York so that both A. H. Wiggin, the State Administrator, and Reeve Schley, County Administrator, believe that no further restrictions are necessary. Lightless nights, however, are to be continued.

"I have not received the order from Dr. Garfield," said Mr. Wiggin last night. "No unusual restrictions on business are contemplated, and I see no reason for expecting any. The shortage still exists, and will continue for some time to come, but with favorable weather conditions the situation has greatly improved."

"The whole matter was discussed last week in Washington," Mr. Schley said. "We went into the matter thoroughly, and there will be no further restrictions on business of any kind unless weather conditions call for it. As the outlook is favorable I can see no reason at this time for placing of added restrictions. New York may be assured that no step will be taken that is not imperative."

Mr. Wiggin received a letter from Dr. Garfield yesterday giving him discretionary power to enforce further restrictions if necessary. The letter said in part:

"As you know, it is our desire that local conservation restrictions shall, as far as possible, be uniform. At the same time we recognize the fact that local conditions differ materially, and consequently require different treatment. Accordingly, the conservation department has prepared the accompanying list of restrictions as the maximum which may be put into effect without further consultation with Washington.

"Please understand that you are not required to put these into effect, but only such part of them, if any, as you may deem necessary in the present acute shortage of coal. Furthermore, in each instance your regulations need not be as drastic as stated below unless you deem it necessary. For example, the closing hour for theatres may be set for 10:30 or later, as you think best, but not earlier than 10 P. M. The point is that you are at liberty to put into force any regulation to the point indicated, but anything more drastic must be submitted to Washington.

"It may be that you will not consider it necessary to make any further regulations other than those already promulgated by Washington. In general, we do not believe in needless irritation of the public, and you should consider whether the advantage to be gained will be more than offset by the damage and inconvenience."

Among the suggested restrictions were these: Business of the day to end at 5 P. M.; evening activities to end at 10 P. M.; many public institutions, desirable under ordinary conditions, might be closed and others curtailed; schools may be put on a one-session basis, if practicable; churches to be kept closed, except on Sunday, and churches, clubs, and other religious, educational or social organizations to consolidate their activities; all inside and outside lighting and all heating not covered by specific order to be reduced to the minimum so that more drastic orders may not be necessary; factories should arrange their hours to save daylight and to relieve the peak load.

Good weather and improved harbor conditions aided in the movement of coal to this city yesterday and last night Mr. Schley said that 28,000 tons of anthracite had arrived.

The report of the coal carrying railroads showed that for 24 hours up to 6 o'clock yesterday morning 25,513 tons of anthracite and 31,902 tons of bituminous had been towed from the coal ports. There were at that time 42 barges with 18,422 tons of anthracite and 28 barges with 11,719 tons of bituminous in barges and ready to be moved.

There were fewer standing cars at tidewater yesterday waiting to be dumped than at any time in the last few weeks. There were yesterday morning within twenty-four hours of tidewater 930 cars of anthracite and 380 cars of bituminous; within twenty-four hours of tidewater, 875 cars of anthracite and 988 cars of bituminous.

The railroads report a general clear-up of congestion in the Eastern district. Spring temperatures prevailed everywhere except in Northern New England. The only delay now is caused by floods.

SHIP SANK A SUBARMINE.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Feb. 13.—An American steamship arriving here today reported having sunk a German submarine in the Mediterranean on Jan. 18 last, after a running fight. The steamer was not hit.

On the outward voyage the same craft was attacked in the Mediterranean by two submarines. One was sighted off the bow and when the captain attempted to ram the undersea boat it submerged and made off. At the same time the gun crew fought off another submarine from the stern.

The crew of the vessel reported that British patrol boats captured two submarines off the Canary Islands on Jan. 7.

ADAMS DROPS OUT; HAYS ELECTED

REMAINS VICE CHAIRMAN

LOYALTY THE WATCHWORD

New Chairman Says Republican Campaign Will Be Conducted on High Plane.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 13.—Will H. Hays of Indiana was elected Chairman of the Republican National Committee this afternoon after John T. Adams of Iowa had withdrawn.

Mr. Adams refused to withdraw until he had received a promise from Senator Boise Penrose and other members of the Old Guard that George W. Perkins and his fellow-Progressives would be eliminated from active participation in the councils of the Republican Party.

This promise was kept by the Old Guard, for the committee tabled the resolution to continue the existing Campaign Committee, which consisted of the Executive Committee, and Progressives George W. Perkins, Harold I. Ickes of Illinois, Everett Colby of New Jersey, James Garfield of Ohio, and Chester A. Howell of California.

Chairman Willcox, who presided at the conference, ruled that the Campaign Committee automatically went out of business at the close of the last campaign. To make doubly sure of the elimination of the Progressives, the committee adopted a rule providing for the election of the Executive Committee by the National Committee, taking all appointive power away from the Chairman.

Despite the charges of pro-Germanism made against Mr. Adams, which, it was agreed here, cost him the Chairmanship, Mr. Adams was allowed to remain Vice Chairman of the committee. No effort was made to depose him. His friends served notice on the Hays contingent that if any attempt were made to remove him from the Vice Chairmanship a fight would be precipitated that would split the Republican Party. Senator Penrose, in behalf of the Hays faction, agreed to allow Mr. Adams to retain his post.

Women's Help Not Asked.

The National Committee ignored the recommendation of the Executive Committee to provide for the appointment of a Women's National Advisory Committee to assist the National Committee. This motion was laid on the table after Senator Penrose had passed the word around that he did not seek its adoption.

The Eastern States were ignored in the selection of officers. Fred U. Upham of Chicago defeated George R. Sheldon of New York for Treasurer, 34 to 9. Mr. Upham succeeds Cornelius N. Bliss, Jr., who resigned. H. P. Thayer of Indianapolis was chosen Sergeant-at-Arms and Guy P. Howard Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms. The Western Committeemen contended they were entitled to the plums, as their section of the country would constitute the political trenches in the future.

Senator Penrose dominated the meeting of the National Committee. It was he who led the Hays forces to victory, forcing Adams to withdraw. The Pennsylvania Senator would not have been able to bring about the election of Hays but for the assistance of Frank H. Hitchcock, ex-Postmaster General and ex-Chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Mr. Hitchcock lined up twelve of the committeemen who were unpledged and who favored a compromise candidate. He held them together during all of the turbulent hours of the conference here in the last few days. He knew that neither Hays nor Adams was sure of victory.

Until yesterday morning Mr. Hitchcock was insisting upon a third man as the only way to prevent a bitter fight on the floor of the meeting. When Senator Penrose and the other Hays leaders submitted their plan for the withdrawal of Mr. Adams to Mr. Hitchcock, the latter readily agreed to it and promised Hays the support of the twelve committeemen who were under his wing.

After receiving Hitchcock's promise, a conference was arranged by Penrose by which Adams and his managers met Penrose and the Hays managers. The question of party harmony and party success was placed squarely before Adams. At the same time he was promised that George W. Perkins and the other Progressives would be eliminated from active participation in the Republican Party. After much wrangling the Adams men capitulated, the Iowa committeemen agreeing to place Hays in nomination.

Thompson Resolution Ignored.

The resolution presented by Mayor William Hale Thompson of Chicago upholding the right of free speech and attacking the Search and Seizure act under which the Government is dealing with the I. W. W. and other alleged menaces, was not reported out by the committee. Mayor Thompson did not inquire as to its fate in the meeting, nor was the subject mentioned publicly.

The committee seated committeemen as follows, where there were contests or vacancies:

Mississippi—M. J. Mulvihill.
Tennessee—Jesse M. Littleton.
Florida—George W. Bean.
Minnesota—Senator Frank D. Kellogg.
Porto Rico—R. H. Todd, Mayor of Ponce.

The committee voted that it should hold meetings at least once a year.

"Republicans throughout the country will be sincerely gratified to learn taht the National Committee adourned with complete harmony prevailing on every side. The discussion relating to the various matters coming before the committee and particularly to the question of the Chairmanship was conducted in an amicable spirit, without any factional division and with the single view to party unity and party success.

"Mr. Hays has been Chairman of the Republican State Committee of Indiana in several hard-fought battles resulting in Republican success and he has the reputation of being one of the best political organizers in the country. He seems to have the peculiar qualifications required at this time, and he will have the full co-operation of the National Committee."

Chairman Hays's Platform.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 13.—Will H. Hays, newly elected Chairman of the Republican National Committee, said tonight that he had made no plans, but expected several members of the National Committee here tomorrow on their way East. He said the same general plan used in the campaign in Indiana would be carried out on a larger scale in the next national campaign.

"My telegram of acceptance," said the new Chairman, "will be my guide, especially the three main points of it. First, that politics should be on a plan that needs no subterfuge; second, that there is but one side to the question of war, and third, equality in party management. Those points will constitute my program."

Mr. Hays's telegram to the committee follows:

"I accept the Chairmanship with a full knowledge of the responsibilities—responsibilities multiplied many times by reason of the national situation and the reconstruction that is to come.

"Every one knows that there will be political activity. The Democratic Party has been busy for months. This political activity should be open and acknowledged and of a character and on a plane that needs no subterfuge.

"There is but one side to the question of war. On that side, supporting the country's cause, shall stand every political party and every member of every political party entitled to any consideration whatsoever. The loyalty of the Republican Party always has been and always will be measured only by the possibilities.

"There is but one possible rule for a party organization. The rights of the individuals within the party to participate in the management of the party's affairs shall be and remain equally sacred and sacredly equal.

"I fully appreciate the honor, and thank you. I shall undertake the task with an absolute conviction that every one of you, and those whom you represent, will co-operate completely, as I most earnestly urge all to do.

"I especially appreciate the magnanimous spirit in which Mr. Adams and all others have acted in behalf of party unity."

ITALY IN WAR TO END, ORLANDO ASSERTS

ROME, Feb. 12.—Enthusiastic applause and cheers for America met the declaration of Premier Orlando at the opening of Parliament today that the war situation was growing better, due to help from the United States replacing Russia.

Premier Orlando reviewed the Versailles conference, and pointed out that so far as Italy was concerned the continuation of the war was no longer a matter of choice, but necessity. This fact, he said, is understood by all patriotic Italians, who are now willing to wage war to the bitter end.

Regarding Italy's aims, the Premier said that they were unimperialistic.

"All she wants," he asserted, "and no less, and she can wish for no more, is the security of her national boundaries by land and sea and also the fulfillment of her national unity.

"It is materially seen how Italy's citizens view the war question by the fact that the unfinished national loan has already brought in three and a half billion lire, and it will within a fortnight be double any previous loan—all this money despite our defeat last Fall. Italians are determined to fight until victory."

ITALIANS BREAK UP AN ASIAGO ATTACK

ROME, Feb. 13.—Italians frustrated an attempt by Austrian infantry to break through the Asiago front, the artillery co-operating effectively with the men in the trenches.

> In the Val Lagrina enemy patrols on the march were dispersed by our batteries. Near Monte Pasubio we exploded a mine, causing considerable damage to enemy positions. In the valley of the Astico and in the western part of the Asiago Plateau both artilleries were more active.
>
> In the zone of Col Caprile an attempt by the enemy infantry to break through, which was preceded by violent artillery preparation, was immediately checked by the energetic work of our troops and effective intervention on the part of our artillery. We captured some prisoners.
>
> East of Conegliano (Piave sector) two enemy captive balloons were set on fire by English aviators.

COUNTS ON OUR RESOURCES

Italian Paper Says They Will Be Overwhelming in the War.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Feb. 13.—The Tribuna answers the questions now universally asked as to whether the defection of Russia will leave the Entente military inferior to the Central Empires and whether the American forces will arrive in time to counteract the elimination of the eastern front.

Speaking of America it says that although England, France, and Italy are superior to the Central Empires in resources and reserves of all kinds, they become secondary factors almost negligible when compared to the immense resources and reserves brought to their assistance by the entrance of the United States into the conflict. If these contributions were at hand their importance would be so evidently decisive as to render any discussion superfluous, it says; but, even taking into account distance and preparations that must be gone through to transport them where needed, their weight will be enormous.

"We cannot yet say how many men the United States are able to put into the field by Spring," the Tribuna goes on. "We know, however, that their transportation will be effected with characteristic rapidity and great efforts, and that the young, ardent, proud, religious civilization will not fail. The Americans alone will be able to send to the battlefields of Europe a number of human reserves greatly superior to those which the enemy can dispose of from year to year and from month to month.

"There is no need to demonstrate the power of the American military effort, nor its technical capacity. The United States stands above all other countries for the greatness of its technical industries and alone produces more steel than the rest of the world put together."

The Tribuna warns all the nations of the Entente to be watchful and avoid grave occurrences such as those which have happened from the time of the Dardanelles to Caporetto, and which with greater foresight might have been avoided and even turned in our favor.

PILLAGE ITALIAN TOWNS.

Rome Reports That Invaders Rob Women and Children of Clothing.

PARIS, Feb. 13.—The Austro-German invaders in Northern Italy daily are resorting to increasing acts of vandalism, violence, pillage, and brutality, according to the statements of prisoners captured by the Italians, a Havas dispatch from Rome says. Officers as well as soldiers are participating.

Udine has been pillaged, and stores and buildings have been destroyed wantonly by intoxicated troops. The rivalry in stealing, it is said, has been so great that fights have broken out between the various groups of the Central Powers. In Udine these fights resulted in the death of fourteen Germans and three Bosnians. There were also bloody conflicts at Pola and Cattaro between the Germans and Austrians.

Women and children, it is added, have been stripped of their clothing, which has been sent to Germany, while foodstuffs, wherever found, also are sent away by officers. The city of Trigesimo has been pillaged of leather and copper, and the church bells there have been taken away. Italian prisoners working on roads for the Austro-Germans are reported to be underfed and forced to subsist on the carcasses of horses.

RIVALRY IN TRENCH RAIDS

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Feb. 12, (Delayed)—In this time, when we are waiting for the enemy to reveal his purpose and power, I find it difficult to write of the small episodes and scenes of life along the lines; nor is it wise to tell how much is known of the enemy's plans, although others with less knowledge are writing more.

The enemy wants to know what we know. For that reason he is making raids up and down the line in order to capture prisoners who may be indiscreet and chatty under the influence of German intelligence officers, who are ever so friendly and hospitable until they find there is "nothing doing" with a young British officer, captured after a fierce struggle, but cool and silent in the enemy's dugout.

I think more may be learned sometimes from the enemy's prisoners than he learns from the British—not because German officers are lacking in pride and honor—most of them are very taciturn under examination—but because so many of the German soldiers are sick in their souls of the war, and many of them have a smoldering hatred of Prussian militarist domination.

The British raids lately have been successful in bringing back good types of prisoners. From some of these intimations are obtained of what is in progress behind the German lines. This body-grabbing business is keeping the troops on both sides on the alert all through the day and night; for it is impossible to foretell where the next dash may be made, and the enemy is especially nervous, as may be seen by his lavish use of night rockets and his sudden spasms of machine gun fire whenever one of his sentries sees visions in No Man's Land.

Germans Hope to Surprise Foes.

I believe the enemy is preparing a surprise attack and is hoping at least to surprise the British as to the time and place. In spite of his advertising the coming offensive for demoralizing propaganda, he presumes on our ignorance. He believes he will catch us napping and roll up our lines by the rapidity and force of his blows. I do not think he will carry out this surprise. In spite of all his secret preparations away back in his training centres and his movements of troops by night and the things hidden in his woods, the British know more than he thinks they know, and, although they do not underestimate the forces he is massing against them, the serious increase of his gun power, and the ability of his generalship, their preparations have been made to meet the shock of battles which may decide the fate of Europe.

There is one thing I do not fully know: I do not know precisely the moral strength or fighting quality of those German soldiers who are now being put through hard training far behind their lines, and of those who, having been trained, are moving nearer to the battlefields in which they will be put to the test of fire. Do they believe in a decisive victory? Are they eager for this supreme and bloody sacrifice of their youth in the last desperate effort to break the western front? Are they untouched by that spirit of revolt which stirred the German people a week or two ago—their fathers and their brothers—because they saw no end to all this blood and agony under the rule of their tyrants?

Sure They Can Stop Germans.

Unless the enemy's best hopes are fulfilled and out of the first storms of the assault he wins a great and striking advantage, I believe in my soul that large numbers of his men will refuse to be driven forward into the shambles of prolonged and indecisive fighting such as that which characterized the battles of Verdun, nor do I doubt that even the German high command itself will be scared at the rage of the people if its first assaults fail and the bull rush of all their legions is stopped by impenetrable lines, as in September of the first year of the war, along the banks of the Marne.

I know the British lines, and I know the British soldier. In the last week or two I have been moving about the front, talking to officers and men in their messes and in their dugouts, and among them all I found absolute faith that, whatever happens, the enemy will fail in his supreme effort. He may have local successes here and there; the British may have to give up small portions of ground to him. When sufficient masses of guns are concentrated on a line of trench that line must be obliterated. It would be a lying thing to pretend that this threatened German offensive is not to be taken seriously; but throughout the British armies there is a certain belief that the enemy will be shattered against their defensive systems and will not achieve a decisive success.

CORPORAL HITCHCOCK GETS $100 AS PRIZE

PARIS, Feb. 13.—Corporal Thomas Hitchcock of Long Island, New York, and W. A. Wellman of Cambridge, Mass., American aviators in French escadrilles, have received $100 prize money each from the Lafayette Flying Corps Committee in recognition of their brilliant exploits in bringing down three German machines in the last six weeks. Hitchcock accounted for two and Wellman for one. These aviators have won also the French War Cross with palms and a special ten days' leave in Paris.

Corporal Hitchcock, who celebrated his nineteenth birthday this week, has just made application for a commission in the Aviation Corps of the American Army, for which he had been previously ineligible because he was under age.

Wellman, who is 26 years old, had been rejected by the American forces on physical grounds, although he is now regarded as one of the best American flyers at the front.

ITALIANS BREAK INTO BAY OF BUCCARI

PARIS, Feb. 13.—The Italian Naval General Staff, according to a Havas dispatch from Rome, announces that Italian torpedo boats forced their way on the night of Feb. 11 west of Dalmatia, into the Bay of Buccari, near Fiume, and torpedoed the largest of the steamers anchored there.

On the night of Dec. 9-10, 1917, Italian torpedo craft, after successfully penetrating the enemy's mine obstructions and mine fields, entered the Harbor of Trieste, where they discharged four torpedoes against the Austrian battleships Wien and Monarch. The Austrians acknowledged the sinking of the former two days later.

LONDONERS SEE BASEBALL.

American Soldiers and Sailors Already Practice in Vacant Lot.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—The extraordinary Spring-like weather has given the American jackies and soldiers an opportunity to introduce Londoners to the national sport. Between Marconi House, where are the NEW YORK TIMES London offices, and Eagle Hut, headquarters of the American Y. M. C. A., is a small vacant lot. There yesterday forenoon a half-dozen Americans, aided by British "Tommies," some in hospital blue, gathered a crowd by baseball fielding practice, just as in any American town.

Their fielders' gloves were a novelty to the Britishers. The quick return of the balls delighted the critics, well used to seeing smart fielding in cricket matches. Even when a ball was missed and dashed into the crowd, it only made the spectators laugh, as they scurried away to avoid it.

FREES 324 ALLIED CAPTIVES.

Austria Mahes Her First Exchange of War Prisoners.

GENEVA, Feb. 13.—The first exchange of prisoners of war between Austria and the Allies has taken place near the Austrian frontier at Buchs.

Three hundred and twenty-four of these exchanged prisoners have arrived at Geneva. They included two American volunteers, one English officer, and seventy British colonials, all of whom were captured on the Turkish and Bulgarian fronts. The other were largely English and Scotch.

PROMINENT GREEKS EXILED.

Three Ex-Ministers Among 83 More Persons Expelled the Country.

ATHENS, Feb. 13.—The military authorities have banished eighty-three additional persons.

Among them are Alexander Tselos, former Minister of the Interior; M. Argiropoulis, former Minister of Communication, and Rear Admiral Damianos, former Minister of Marine; nine former members of the Chamber of Deputies, several retired officials, and two newspaper men.

2,100,000 GERMANS ON WESTERN FRONT

THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent this morning questioned several Deputies of the Socialist group in the Chamber lobby regarding the attitude of their party in relation to President Wilson's declaration. One and all affirmed their adherence to the main lines of the President's program, and contrasted it forcibly with the German Emperor's grandiloquent and bellicose utterance at Hamburg. They urged that it was quite erroneous to suppose that the minority or extremist section of the Socialists had won control from the official leaders. In comparing the President's attitude with that of Trotzky, it is most apparent that the Socialists do not entertain the idea of abandoning considerations of honor and justice in face of the German menace.

Socialists Stand by Wilson.

"What the President tells us is that America will fight with every ounce of her gigantic strength for his just peace program, which is identical with ours," said one of the Socialist leaders. "As for Trotzky, his is a weak policy of renunciation. He prefers a rotten peace to a continuance of effort. French workers sympathize with Russian ideals, but there is no danger of their following the Russian lead. Our message to President Wilson is: 'We thank you. We know we can count on you and on America, and you, too, can count on us to the death.'"

On the verge of the 1918 campaign this is not an unworthy attitude on the part of what has been regarded in some quarters as the least solid section of the population of France.

New German Defenses Are Formidable.

GRAND HEADQUARTERS OF THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, Feb. 13, (Associated Press.)—German preparations for the announced offensive on the allied front have not brought with them any relaxation of German vigilance or efforts to meet any possible attack by the Allies. New concentrations of German forces are gathering in the rear of their lines simultaneously with the hard work which continues on the front line positions, where a most formidable system of defenses has been erected during the Winter months.

Various authorities make widely different estimates of the number of German divisions which may eventually be brought into the line on this front, should the Germans decide to engage in battle on a large and decisive scale. The exact total of the German forces in the front line and in the immediate reserve is known to a unit.

One hundred and twelve divisions occupy the German front line facing the French, British, American, and Belgian troops, while their immediate reserves total sixty-three divisions. (On the basis of 12,000 men in a German division, this would be 2,100,000 troops.)

Possibly several additional divisions have reached various points behind the lines, but the fact has not been established with certainty. At any rate, it is agreed by authorities here that the greatest possible number the Germans could add to their forces on the western front does not exceed twenty divisions, which would bring the total to 195 divisions, (2,340,000 men.)

FRENCH RAIDING IN CHAMPAGNE

Penetrate to the Third Line in Sudden Dash and Take 100 Germans.

DESTROY FOE'S DEFENSES

Canadians and Germans Engage in Hand-to-Hand Combats Near Passchendaele.

PARIS, Feb. 13.—A big raid was carried out today by the French southwest of Butte Mesnil. The German positions were entered up to the third line, and many defenses and shelters were destroyed.

This announcement was made by the War Office in its regular communication tonight, the text of which says:

> In the Champagne, after brief artillery preparation, we carried out a big raid in the region south of Butte Mesnil, on a front of about 1,200 meters. Our detachments penetrated the German position as far as the third line, overthrew the enemy defenses, and destroyed numerous shelters. We captured more than 100 prisoners.
>
> In the period from Feb. 1 to 10 our pilots brought down twenty-eight German airplanes, fourteen of which were entirely destroyed and the other fourteen seriously damaged.

The text of the afternoon statement reads:

> There was heavy artillery fighting in the region of Pinon and northwest of Rheims. The French carried out several successful raids east of Auberive and in the Vosges, and brought back prisoners.
>

Canadians Score in Two Raids.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Canadian troops have carried out two successful raids, in which they captured prisoners and inflicted losses on the enemy, the official statement from British headquarters in France and Belgium tonight says. In an attack this morning northwest of Passchendaele, in the Ypres sector, German troops temporarily occupied two British posts. The British later drove the Germans out in a counterattack. The statement reads:

> In a successful raid southeast of Hargicourt reported this morning, carried out by the Canadians, in addition to thirteen prisoners, two machine guns were brought back to our lines. Many Germans were killed in fighting above ground and four trench mortars were destroyed. Seventeen dugouts in the enemy's first line and others in his support line, whose occupants refused to come out when summoned, were bombed. The casualties incurred by the raiding party were slight and all were brought in. Another successful raid was carried out last night by Canadians in the neighborhood or Hill 70, north of Lens. Considerable opposition was encountered, in spite of which six prisoners and a machine gun were captured. Our casualties again were light.
> Local fighting took place at dawn this morning northwest of Passchendaele, where a hostile party attacked and temporarily occupied two of our posts. The enemy subsequently was ejected by a counter-attack and both posts were regained. The enemy's artillery showed increased activity this morning south and southwest of Lens.

BERLIN, via London, Feb. 13.—Fierce hand-to-hand fighting has occurred north of Lens and around Peronne, according to the official statement from General Headquarters issued this afternoon, the British undertaking strong reconnoitring expeditions, which are reported to have been repulsed.

The text of the statement follows:

> Fronts of Crown Prince Rupprecht and the German Crown Prince.—Strong enemy reconnoitring detachments north of Lens and north of Omignon Brook (near Peronne) were repulsed in hand-to-hand fighting. Otherwise the activity was limited to minor reconnoitring engagements. There was artillery action on isolated sectors.
>
> Front of Grand Duke Albrecht.—After a violent increase of the firing between Flirey and the Moselle, Several French companies attacked our lines near Remenauville and in the western part of the Bois Le Prêtre. After a short fight the enemy was repulsed with heavy losses; some prisoners remained in our hands.
>
> There have been artillery and mine firing duels at Sudelkopf and Hartmanns-Weilerkopf, (Alsace.)
>

CANADIANS AT TOP STRENGTH.

Have More Men, Guns, and Material at the Front Than Ever.

CANADIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Feb. 13, (By Canadian Press Limited.)—After three years and a half of war Canada is entering upon the Spring campaign stronger in men and material and guns than at any previous time since the mobilization at Valcartier marked the creation of the Dominion's first division. The Canadians are holding a longer front than ever before.

While military regulations prevent any extensive statement from the field as to developments, it may be said that one effect of the recent increase in forces has been to add materially to the rifle strength in the line.

FOUND ALLIES' FRONT FIRM.

Can Withstand Any Attack, General Hodges Asserts.

AYER, Mass., Feb. 13.—Full confidence in the ability of the Allies to withstand any attack that may be brought against them was expressed tonight by Major Gen. Harry F. Hodges, who resumed command of the 76th Division, national army, at Camp Devens, today, after a visit to the battle front in France and Belgium. General Hodges said:

"I spent ten days at the British front and a like period at the French front, in two very important sectors, where every facility was given me to study everything. While I do not feel at liberty to speak in detail of what I saw, I will say that, as a result of my observation, I have the utmost confidence in the ability of our allies to withstand any attack that may be brought against them. From association with both British and French officers I know that they share the same confidence.

"I also made a short visit to the American Headquarters and training area, where those of our troops whom I saw appeared to be in excellent condition in every respect."

General Hodges at 8:30 o'clock Monday morning will review for the first time the entire division here.

WOULD TAX FRENCH MORE.

Finance Minister Proposes Increases to Meet Threatened Deficit.

PARIS, Feb. 13.—Faced with a probable deficit of 239,000,000 francs (about $47,800,000) for the first three months of 1918, including interest on the public debt, Finance Minister Klotz has addressed a proposal to the Budget Commission, urging the following tax increases: Income tax from twelve and one-half to fourteen per cent; stamp tax on marriage contracts, legal documents and so forth, from 25 centimes to fifty centimes; wine, beer and cider two francs per hectolitre; hygienic drinks, 90 centimes; wine, 50 centimes; cider, 100 per cent. increase; sugar, 50 per cent., and vinegar an increase of 10 centimes per litre.

Minister Klotz estimates that the increased taxes will net the State an additional 361,800,000 francs, or enough to cover the difference between the 7,769,000,000 francs already granted by the Budget Committee, and the 7,530,000,000 francs now in sight.

AMERICAN GUNNERS THIN GERMAN LINES

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Feb. 12, (Associated Press.)—Aside from increased aerial activity, the American sector has been normal for the last twenty-four hours. Harassing artillery fire and patrolling operations have been kept up, but there have been no clashes.

The American gunners are said to be growing more accurate daily. They have been especially effective in registering on the roads and light railways back of the enemy's lines. So accurate has been the shrapnel fire against the first lines of the enemy that they are now nearly abandoned, the Germans keeping only a few men in them. In a sector such as this the Germans seldom man their first lines fully, but opposite the American positions they are reported to be keeping considerably less than the usual number in the trenches.

The number of enemy snipers and sniping posts has been reduced still further by the American sharpshooters, machine gunners, and artillerymen.

Airplanes were overhead everywhere today. The enemy late in the day sent over a considerable number of machines in battle formation. They were met and driven back by a French squadron.

The wounding of three men in an accident was reported today, constituting the only new casualties.

TUSCANIA BURIED NOW TOTAL 171

ALL IN NUMBERED GRAVES

NATIONAL ANTHEMS SUNG

Villagers in Rain Pay Tribute to the Dead—Plan Monument in Their Memory.

A SCOTCH SEAPORT, Feb. 12. (Associated Press.)—Up to Tuesday night, a week after the disaster, 171 victims of the torpedoed Tuscania had been buried at different points on the Scottish coast. These were divided as follows: Americans, 131 identified and 33 unidentified; crew, 4 identified and 3 unidentified.

The Associated Press correspondent co-operated with the American Army officers in obtaining these figures, which go forward to Washington as the most accurate and complete list obtainable. The last seventeen of these bodies recovered—all Americans—were buried this afternoon, villagers again coming many miles in a downpour of rain to pay their simple tribute to the American dead. The bodies were transported to the burial place on one big motor truck, which was followed along the route, several miles long, by the squad of twenty-five khaki-clad American survivors and the village mourners. One of the villagers carried the Union Jack, while an American soldier held aloft the Stars and Stripes.

Sang National Anthems.

At the graveside the American soldiers sang "The Star-Spangled Banner," followed by the natives singing "God Save the King." The usual military salute was then fired, ending the ceremony.

Temporary fences have been built around the graves, to be replaced by a permanent enclosure as soon as the materials can be brought to these desolate shores. A British Colonel who has worked day and night since the disaster helping the Americans bury their dead announced today that the people of the nearby countryside had started a public subscription to erect a permanent monument to the Americans.

There are eight Americans still here too ill to leave, several of them still dazed by their experiences. They are quartered in nearby farmhouses and village hotels. These men are F. I. Benefiel, E. L. Lystrom, Wilbur C. Nutt, Boyd E. Hancock, E. L. Harpham, Henry Schurting, James J. Colwell, and F. A. Gocher.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Walter Hines Page, the American Ambassador, spent today at a military camp where a number of the survivors of the Tuscania are lodged. He talked with a number of the officers and soldiers and expressed his satisfaction that there were no evidences of any shaken nerves among them as a result of their experience.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—War Department advices indicate that very few American soldiers lost their lives in the destruction of the liner Tuscania in addition to the 164 reported today as buried on the Scottish Coast. The latest reports place the American loss at not more than 170 of the 2,179 who were on board the ship, although the list of rescued still is far from complete.

Seven additional survivors were officially reported tonight, reducing the department's list of those not recorded as saved to about 260. The Associated Press list of the unreported, made up by checking both official and unofficial advices against the Tuscania's passenger list, was reduced to 171.

The War Department is daily exchanging long cablegrams with the Embassy at London in an effort to complete the survivors' roll and untangle names garbled in transmission. In spite of the fact that only some 260 of those on the passenger list are officially unaccounted for, the department has more than 260 names of survivors which it has been unable to decipher. About forty of these are supposed to be duplications, and as many more are names of men of whom there is no record.

Corrected List of Dead.

The home addresses of the American soldiers buried on the Scottish coast (taken from The Associated Press list of those unaccounted for, as checked up with the Tuscania's passenger list) follow: The spelling from the Scotch seaport does not agree in some instances with the official passenger list:

NEW YORK MEN LOST.

News of the death of the New York men on the Tuscania was given to their relatives last night for the first time by reporters. The information in each case was received as only confirming what had been suspected.

Henry F. Speidel of the 213th Aero Squadron, was a drafted man who went to Camp Upton last Fall. He was transferred from there to Texas and assigned to the aviation corps. Speidel was a chauffeur employed by Stern Brothers, before he joined the army. His brother, Julius, is at Camp Upton, a private in the 306th Field Artillery. Speidel was 22 years old and unmarried.

Herman Rupp, born in Switzerland, enlisted in the army last November. He was assigned to the 158th Aero Squadron, and was sent abroad after a brief training in Texas. He was a chauffeur employed by W. E. Benjamin. He was 28 years old and unmarried.

Joseph G. Maystrick of Long Island City, a member of the 213th Aero Squadron, was 35 years old when he enlisted in the army last December. Maystrick was prominent in politics in Long Island City and was instrumental in persuading a dozen or more young men to join the army. He himself tried to enlist when the war started, but was rejected. Later he tried again and was accepted for the aviation corps. Maystrick was unmarried and lived with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Maystrick, of 30 Clark Street. He has a brother on the police force in New York City, and another in the Fire Department.

FOUR MICHIGAN MEN DEAD.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 13.—Four Michigan men are known to have been lost on the Tuscania and six others are still missing. Those dead are Antonio Abboni, Detroit; William R. Johnson, Metamora; Herbert C. J. Bresner, Saginaw, and Wilbur Clark of Jackson.

Abboni, 26 years old, boarded at the home of S. J. Arditto, 257 Blaine Avenue. He was the last of his family, having no surviving relatives either in America or in Italy. He was employed in a local automobile factory when he enlisted in the Michigan National Guard on America's declaration of war.

Wilbur Clark of Jackson, 19 years old, was a student in a local high school when the United States declared war on Germany. He promptly gave up his studies and entered the Culver Military Academy to fit himself for Government service. He enlisted last August and was sent to Columbus Barracks and thence to Kelly Field, San Antonio, and later to Mineola. He was a member of the One Hundredth Aero Squadron. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Clark. His grandfather fought in the Civil War.

Efforts to find the relatives of Herbert C. J. Bresner of Saginaw and William R. Johnson of Metamora have been unsuccessful so far.

The six Michigan men still missing are: Theodore Montgomery, Manistique; Fred Wilkening, Charlotte; L. W. Wright, Hillsdale; Connor A. Collins, Battle Creek, and Clarence W. Allen, Traverse City.

SEVEN VICTIMS FROM OREGON.

Special to The New York Times.

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 13.—William P. Morin, one of Oregon's victims on the Tuscania, was 28 years old, and until the time of joining the Twentieth Engineers was employed as a carriageman by the Inman Poulsen Lumber Company. Three years ago he married Miss Evelyn Smith. In addition to the widow he is survived by his parents and a brother.

Riley F. Murray, reported dead, left a wife and children in this city. At present the wife is ill, and her condition has become worse because of worry over her husband.

James Pierce is the son of James L. Pierce of Creswell, Ore. He enlisted early in the war, was about 25 years old and has been a resident of Creswell practically all his life.

Theodore Eugene Lewton of Forest Grove, Ore., was 25 years old. He enlisted about three months ago.

Terry Tuttle of Elgin, aged 22, was a nephew of Mrs. W. D. Starbird of this city, whose husband, Captain Starbird, is in France.

George Nelson Bjork, aged 24, who enlisted at Helena, Ore., had been stationed at Camp American University, Washington, D. C., for two or three months. He leaves his mother in Rainier.

James B. Gurney of Glide, Ore., was a freshman in the State University last Fall, when he decided to enlist in the 20th Engineers. His brother, who also was on the Tuscania, was saved.

MONTANA MEN MISSING.

Special to The New York Times.

BUTTE, Mon., Feb. 13.—Three Butte men—John Edwards, Clifford Wellington Walter, and Jack J. Byrne—are listed among the Tuscania's missing, and two former residents of this city are in the list of victims.

"If a torpedo ever hits a ship that I am on when they send me across, I'm done for. I can't swim a lick in cold water."

This is what John Edwards said to friends in this city the day before he left Butte for Camp Lewis. Edwards knew that once he was plunged into cold water he would be seized with cramps, although when a resident of England he took part in long-distance swimming races.

Jack J. Byrne was a member of Company I, 20th Engineers, and was a native of Butte. His parents are dead, and for a number of years Byrne had made his home here with an aunt, Mrs. A. Byrne. He was an enthusiastic athlete and a member of a local football eleven. He was also an ardent follower of the indoor sports.

Clifford Wellington Walter is well known here. He came to Butte about three years ago from Flint, Mich. When the trouble with Mexico started he enlisted in Utah and served on the border with the Utah artillery. He went to the Presidio last Summer and was commissioned First Lieutenant.

Chauncey Davidson, of Anaconda, Montana, is among the missing. He was born 22 years ago in the Deer Lodge Valley and was graduated from the Anaconda High School two years ago. He married Miss Martha Harrison, of this city, four days before he enlisted, Dec. 6, in Company F, of the Twentieth Engineers, Forestry Department. He was sent for training to the American Institute near Washington, D. C.

SKINNER BORN IN ENGLAND.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—Sergeant H. A. Skinner, who was lost on the Tuscania, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Skinner of 316 North Independence Avenue, Rockford, Ill. He was born Nov. 22, 1894, in London, England, and came to the United States with his parents July 8, 1912. He took out his first naturalization papers a year ago last Saturday.

Skinner enlisted in Chicago Nov. 22, 1917, and was sent to Jefferson Barracks for preliminary training and equipment. Thence he went to Kelley Field, San Antonio, Texas, then to Gresner Field. Later he accompanied the 158th Aero Squadron to New York. Besides his parents there are two brothers and six sisters.

STAMFORD MAN AMONG LOST.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Feb. 13.—Julius David Wagner, reported to be among the lost of the Tuscania, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Wagner of 798 Main Street, Stamford. He was 22 years old. He went to Camp Devens in November and was placed in Co. F, 20th Engineers, Forestry Division. About five weeks ago he was transferred to Washington.

Wagner studied architecture in the Cooper Institute, New York, after completing grammar school work here. Up to the time he entered the service he was employed as a draftsman in a local rolling mill. His father is now in the Internal Revenue Service. There are two other sons and two daughters, one of the latter Mrs. Gertrude Romer of New York. The parents had no official notification of the identification of their son tonight.

BLOW TO AGED WOMAN.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 13.—Orvel N. Casper of Milwaukee, a Tuscania victim, enlisted on July 17, 1917, in the Wisconsin National Guard at Camp MacArthur, Waco, Texas. Transferred to the Sanitary Squad, he was later made Camp Inspector. His parents here received a letter from him written Jan. 22.

Fred A. Rudolph, 20 years old, is a son of Mrs. John De Greene, who is aged and heartbroken and cannot realize her son will never return. Tonight she could give no information except that her son enlisted last Fall. She lost her husband in a train accident and another son died suddenly in a hospital before she could reach him.

Charles Swanson, 28 years old, of Rothschild, Wis., two years ago took up a homestead in Minnesota, and in spare time kept books. He enlisted last Fall. George A. Reinhard of Jefferson, Wis., 24 years old, enlisted Dec. 12, 1917.

Mr. and Mrs. Brick of Park Falls, Wis., have received an official dispatch saying that the body of their son, Leo Brick, 23 years old, had been washed ashore.

WELL-KNOWN ENGINEER LOST.

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 13.—Captain Philip Vincent Sherman, listed as one of those victims of the Tuscania disaster buried on the Scottish shores, formerly lived in Kansas City. He was connected with the engineering department of the Missouri Pacific Railroad.

Captain Sherman was a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and widely known as a railroad construction engineer.

SEEKS TO AVENGE LOST SON.

Ship Losses and Output Compared.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Ship tonnage sunk by submarines in 1917 was nearly three times as great as the total of production in the United States and Great Britain during that year.

This was disclosed today by the announcement of Andrew Bonar Law in the House of Commons that Great Britain produced only 1,163,474 tons of shipping last year. The output of the United States was 901,223 tons, making a total combined tonnage of 2,064,697, while sinkings by submarines last year are generally reckoned at 6,000,000 tons.

While complete figures on construction in Japan, Italy, France and other nations in 1917 are not yet available, officials here do not believe their aggregate equalled the total of the United States. If that is the case submarine sinkings more than doubled all new tonnage produced.

Both American and British officials expect a very different story in 1918. Naval officials in both countries have confidently predicted that the submarine will be curbed in the Summer of this year. Secretary Daniels believes that effectual results will be obtained in the early Summer. Admiral Sir John R. Jellicoe, former chief of the British Naval Staff, recently predicted that by next August it could be said that the "submarine menace is killed," although he predicted dark months before that time.

The output of ship tonnage in the United States in 1918 has been variously estimated at from 2,500,000 to 4,000,000, with Shipping Board officials confident that at least 3,500,000 tons will be completed. No estimate of Great Britain's output has been received, but that country is expected to increase materially its 1917 figures.

Japan's operations just now are hampered by lack of steel, but this handicap is expected soon to be overcome, and that country also is expected to increase its output this year. Other countries are building few ships.

LANDS 107 SURVIVORS OF STEAMER ANDANIA

No Lives Lost When Cunarder Was Sunk by U-Boat About Eleven Days Ago.

A British liner landed yesterday at an Atlantic port 107 survivors of the Cunard liner Andania, which was sunk by a U-boat about eleven days ago while under convoy and destined for this port.

The twenty-three passengers were preparing for religious services when the steamship was struck by the torpedo. The missile hit the Andania amidships. The vessel immediately began to list toward the damaged side an to settle. There was no panic. The sea was smooth, and it was believed the ship would remain afloat for hours. While some of the convoying war vessels searched for the submarine another vessel came near, and a line was passed to the damaged craft. The navy men tried to tow the Andania back to the coast, but after several hours she went down. Meanwhile the passengers and the 160 members of the crew were rescued in the lifeboats. Every one got away in safety.

"We were in the boats four hours," said one of the passengers. "Then a patrol boat came along and took us to Larne, near Belfast."

Some of the passengers said the vessel which brought them across picked up S O S calls from the Tuscania. This occasioned some excitement on board, but no one knew that the Tuscania carried American troops.

Among the passengers who arrived was the Rev. MacLean Watt, Chaplain of the Gordon Highlanders. Mr. Watt was two years at the front. He comes to America to stimulate interest in the personal side of the war.

ANOTHER SPANISH SHIP SUNK BY A SUBMARINE

The Ceferino, Attacked in the Canaries, Third Spanish Victim in Three Weeks.

MADRID, Feb. 13.—The Spanish steamer Ceferino has been sunk by a submarine near Ferro Island, one of the Canary group.

All the members of the crew were saved. They were towed by the submarine to the port of La Estaca, in the Canaries.

The Ceferino is the third Spanish steamer sunk by submarines in less than three weeks. The others were the Giralda and the Sebastian. Protests have been made by the Spanish Government against the sinking of these two vessels.

The Ceferino was a steamer of 3,647 tons. She was built in England in 1899, and her home port was Aviles.

MADRID, Feb. 12.—The Italian Ambassador to Spain called on Marquis de Alhucemas, the Spanish Premier, late yesterday, and gave him all available information which had been collected by Italy regarding the torpedoing of the Italian steamship Duca di Genova. The Ambassador requested that whatever details the Spanish authorities had been able to collect be given him and was informed that the investigation by the naval authorities at Valencia had not been completed.

The Spanish Cabinet met today to consider the sinking of the Duca di Genova and of the Spanish steamship Giralda. The case of the Giralda is considered one of the most important matters the Cabinet has had to consider since the beginning of the war.

ALLIED ADMIRAL JUSTIFIES JELLICOE

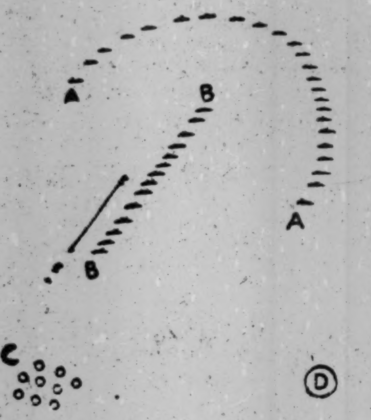
RICH BRITONS ECONOMIZE

Lady Northcliffe Supports Hospital with Housekeeping Savings—"Rubber" Gun Shoots 23 Miles.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—Recently I had an opportunity to get the views of a high naval expert, belonging to another allied navy, on the much-discussed battle of Jutland. When I put the direct question to him as to whether Jellicoe's policy in that fight was the right one, he took his pencil and drew this rough diagram on a sheet of paper:



Situation When Visibility Failed.
A—Position of British fleet. B—German fleet. C—Probable minefield. D—German base at Heligoland.

The expert gave this explanation:

"When visibility failed, the German fleet, instead of heading south toward the base at Heligoland, headed southwest. I submit that there was enough ground for suspicion that the Germans were out for the express purpose of engaging the British and leading them into a minefield to justify Jellicoe's decision. Through that minefield the Germans could steer safely by chart, but the British fleet would be destroyed. Furthermore, in this desperate chase the pursuing fleet would use its torpedoes at an enormous disadvantage, owing to the shorter range at which the pursued ships could shoot. The difference in distance would have been more than 50 per cent. in favor of the Germans. Sir John Jellicoe, with his cautious temperament, could never have reached any other decision than to abandon the chase."

"Would you have done the like thing in the circumstances?" I asked the Admiral, for such was his rank.

"I am afraid I wouldn't," he replied, "but that is a matter of temperament."

The other day I had a chance for personal observation of the wave of domestic economy sweeping over England. I went with Lord Northcliffe to see the Lord Chief Justice bid adieu to the English bench and bar. On the way we were to stop at the Northcliffe home, and instead of going to St. James's Place, as of old, the driver was told to go to 8 Buckingham Street. We went in front of Buckingham Palace and passed the Hotel Rubens, turning to the left and then left again into a street that was more alley than street. We drew up in front of a row of small tenement houses, and Lord Northcliffe got out, saying: "This is my home, and the one next door is Lord Lytton's." I was extremely interested, and went inside to see more of this change of state as compared with St. James's Place.

On the ground floor there was a room about eighteen feet square which was the dining room, furnished neatly and plainly; in the rear the "den," and then a large hall with a stairway. The house fronts about twenty-five feet and has three stories. I should say that $100 a month would be a pretty stiff rent for it.

"What did you do with the fine house in St. James's Place?" I asked.

"We let it to a man who spent five million dollars building a fine house. It was too expensive to maintain in war times, so the owner closed it up and came down to what he regarded as contraction and economy in St. James's Place. We, in turn, moved to this little house, displacing people who find a flat good enough, and their predecessors in the flat doubtless now content themselves in lodgings. We keep three servants here when we can get them. With the money saved by living in Buckingham Street instead of St. James's Place Lady Northcliffe is able to keep and support a hospital of her own. So far from finding it a deprivation, my wife and I like it. It is less trouble and there are fewer complications."

I passed through Boulogne several days ago. This old French town always strikes me as the maw of the monster of war. In no other place back of the lines does there seem to be such immense military movement and activity. It was a wet day, and there being no cabs at the landing stage, I had to find a man to carry my baggage, and we walked to the railway station. The checkroom was crowded with soldiers leaving parcels; I had to wait two hours for my turn. Meanwhile darkness came on, and the barn of a station was unlighted except for a few electric bulbs in the offices surrounding the public space.

Such inconvenience at the Pennsylvania or New York Central station, say, five years ago, would have produced a mood of impatience, but it had no such effect upon me the other night. I made the best of the two hours writing letters by the courtesy of the woman who kept the news stand and who sported two electric lights, and promenading up and down to keep myself warm, (of course there was not a spark of fire anywhere.)

In contrast with this picture of discomfort, the train from Charing Cross to Folkestone had two nice Pullman cars and an excellent, though not overabundant, luncheon was served consisting of chop, potatoes, cabbage, sugarless apple tart, cheese, and coffee.

I crossed the Channel the eleventh time this year without seeing a submarine, and what is even more gratifying, without encountering any characteristic Channel weather that is so upsetting.

I heard of a new kind of gun the other day. It is called, by the Canadians, at least, and perhaps by others, a "rubber" gun, the name doubtless owing its origin to American slang. This gun "rubbers" in any old direction and shoots twenty-three miles. It is used to make officers uncomfortable in their headquarters and render it necessary for them to move. That has never been "cricket" heretofore, but the boche is not much on cricket, anyway.

Among English officers there is universal recognition of the brilliant services rendered to General Plumer and his army by his aid, General Sir William Harrington, and General Mitchell, head of the Intelligence Department, the latter a Canadian. These two men have figured most actively in all the successful operations under Plumer, and when he went to Italy he took them both with him. The younger element in the army is watching Harrington and Mitchell, with the hope that they will come back to France and find exercise for their extraordinary abilities on a still larger scale.

In previous letters I have commented on the esteem in which Secretary of War Baker is held in Europe. The impression in the army is universally favorable to him. From the political point of view, his natural bias toward liberalism puts him in tune with the prevailing spirit of the time, and he may cut a good deal of figure in public affairs before the war and its varied consequences pass away. The Bolshevist storm now raging over Russia will take its course, like all other world movements, westward. Such men as Mr. Baker, whose convictions have their roots in temperament, and are, therefore, deeply sincere and unchangeable, and who, while sympathetic with the masses, have intellectual training and social stability, will be fit interpreters of popular instincts and aspirations if the movement referred to should sweep to America.

Having stated so much, I proceed to remark that his weekly reviews which, owing to his office, are cabled over here in full, impress nearly every one as taking the Secretary into a field not his own. I do not overstate current criticism when I say that there is an appearance in these effusions of pretense and artificiality, a certain amateurishness in professional pose, and, finally, downright lack of information, all of which makes Europe wonder a little bit. And it is a pity that a man personally so modest and possessing such sense of propriety should be doing something that strengthens an unfortunate impression long existent in Europe, though lacking real basis, that Americans are too self-assertive—in a word, that they are inclined to be boastful.

TO SPEAK AT AUTO SHOW.

Hugo Will Discuss Auto Problems at Bronx Exhibition.

Secretary of State Hugo will attend the Bronx Automobile Show this evening in the Second Field Artillery Armory, Franklin Avenue and 166th Street, and make an address on the increase in the use of motor vehicles in New York State, which exceeds all other States in the country. There were 400,000 automobiles in use in the State on Jan. 1.

Mr. Hugo will speak of the growing importance of motor trucks for transportation service, and it is expected that he will discuss the problem that has arisen in New Jersey in the insistence by that State that corporation-owned cars must take out a New Jersey license before they can operate there.

Yesterday was Navy Day at the Bronx show, and the attendance was the largest of the week.

DEMANDS DEATH PENALTY FOR BOLO

DEFENSE SCORES A POINT

PARIS, Feb. 13.—Captain Mornet, the prosecutor in the court-martial of Bolo Pacha on the charge of treason, today began the summing up of the Government's case.

He first defined "intelligence with the enemy" in the meaning of the code. He pointed out that the mere fact that Bolo received money from Count von Bernstorff, the former German Ambassador at Washington, through Adolph Pavenstedt, the former head of the Amsinck banking house of New York, was sufficient grounds for asking for a death sentence, even though the money was not used against France. Consequently, Captain Mornet said, he would ask for the death penalty.

The Government's counsel then referred to Bolo's relations with Fernand Menier, ex-President of the Paris Court of Appeals, and ex-Premier Joseph Caillaux. The prosecutor declared that the Bolo case was preliminary to other trials, in the course of which all the scandals now under investigation would be cleared up.

Captain Mornet spoke only a few words concerning Darius Porchère, a co-defendant with Bolo. He said he did not ask the death penalty for Porchère, since he played an entirely secondary rôle in the affair. The prosecutor seemed to attach little importance to Porchère's activities, although he asserted that the latter was perfectly aware of the nature of the business he had engaged in at the request of Bolo.

Captain Mornet dealt at length with the question of Bolo's use of German money he is alleged to have received. The prosecutor maintained that Germany did not expect any immediate results from the purchase of Le Journal, but had an eye to the far future, even perhaps after the war.

As the prosecutor developed his case this afternoon, he frequently punctuated his arguments with the emphatic statement: "I demand a sentence of death."

Bolo's personality paled into insignificance as Captain Mornet unraveled the German intrigue involving prominent personages in many countries and extending over two worlds.

"This is only one instance of treason in France," said the prosecutor. "This is merely the first chapter. Other chapters will follow."

The evidence from the United States appeared to be the strongest card of the prosecutor, and on it he dwelt at length. He rebuked Mgr. Bolo, brother of the accused man, for suggesting that the American evidence was manufactured and false. Count von Bernstorff, Adolph Pavenstedt, Gottlieb von Jagow, former German Foreign Secretary; Hugo Schmidt, former agent in New York of the Deutsche Bank, who is interned in the United States; Senator Charles Humbert, and William Randolph Hearst were mentioned by name by the prosecutor in his address, but he avoided any mention of ex-Premier Joseph Caillaux.

After saying that France had escaped the gravest danger since the Marne, Captain Mornet closed with these words:

"The eyes of our allies are on us. In the eyes of France we are judging a man who attempted to do in France what has been accomplished in Russia. We must show no weakness. The world is fighting for its liberty and is in expectancy.

"In times of peace I have stood here many times asking the death penalty for a miserable individual guilty of murder, and it was not without a twinge of regret. But today, without pity or mercy, but with a sense of stern duty to my country and our allies, I ask for death."

Before the closing of Captain Mornet's address word was brought in that the civil court had refused Bolo's request for an annulment of his first marriage, thereby convicting him of bigamy.

The crowd which swamped the courtroom to hear Captain Mornet sum up the State's case against Bolo broke all previous records at the trial. The proceedings were re-opened belatedly with the people massed to suffocation. The spectators were perched on chairs, desks, and radiators, or seated on the floor, famous Parisian actresses sharing the benches with society leaders.

The crowd at the outset, however, was doomed to disappointment, for the prosecutor, instead of beginning his summing up, read a letter from Premier Clemenceau announcing that two documents sent in August and September, 1917, by Proescutor Mornet to the Minister of War, then Paul Painlevé, referred to in the proceedings yesterday, would be placed at the disposal of the defense. This was considered to be a point for the latter, as the State had bitterly opposed the publication of the papers.

ABDUL HAMID BURIED.

High Honors Paid to Ex-Sultan at Funeral in Constantinople.

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 13.—Advices received here from Constantinople say that the body of Abdul Hamid, former Sultan of Turkey, who died recently in exile, was conveyed by sea from the Begler Bey Palace to the old Seraglio Palace.

Prayers for the dead were offered in the Sophia Mosque. Troops lined the route of the funeral procession, and the heir to the throne, the Imperial Princes, Abdul Hamid's son, all the members of the Cabinet, the Presidents and deputations from both houses of Parliament, and the Foreign Ambassadors followed the coffin.

The interment of the former Sultan was in the mausoleum built by his grandfather, Sultan Mahad.

HOOVER PROTESTS RISE IN BREAD COST

URGES WHEAT SALE LIMIT

Wants Farmers and Retailers to Retain 30% of Their Normal Supply —New Restaurant Order.

A telegram received by the Federal Food Board yesterday from United States Food Administrator Hoover announced that he was opposed to any attempt on the part of the bakers to increase the price of bread because of the higher cost of the wheat substitutes which are required in the making of the prescribed "victory" loaf. The telegram was as follows:

> Rumors have reached our baking section that bakeries purpose raising bread prices on account of the price of wheat flour substitutes. As one barrel of flour produces on the average 275 one-pound loaves and these substitutes will comprise only one-fifth the flour contents of victory bread, the cost of bread will be increased less than one-tenth of a cent per loaf for each dollar per barrel that substitutes cost more than flour.
> Present prices of substitutes are due to resales within trade, and in some sections due also to transportation difficulties. We earnestly believe that freer movement of grains to mills will result in lower prices. It would be most unfortunate for the wheat-saving campaign if the introduction of victory bread were to be signalized by an advance in prices. Please inform the bakers of your State that you do not think an advance in price due to a temporary condition like this is justified. The matter of resales within trade should likewise have earnest consideration.

Two other telegrams were received from Food Administrator Hoover yesterday. One notified the Food Board that all hotels, restaurants, club boarding houses, and other public eating places would be requested to purchase a pound of wheat flour substitutes for every four pounds of wheat flour bought for the baking of bread and rolls. The other telegram urged the Food Board to obtain the co-operative assurance of farmers and retailers that they would not engage in the purchasing or selling of more than 70 per cent. of their normal supply of wheat.

Discussing the revocation of the license of the poultry firm of B. Baff & Co., Federal Food Administrator Arthur Williams, said:

"The firm had a hearing, and, after a careful review of the testimony, the board felt that the license of the firm should be revoked for the period of the war because of their profiteering in eggs. I do not care to discuss Baff's statement that big interests were responsible for the action taken by the Food Administration, because what we are after is the protection of the consumer. We felt that the license should be discontinued, but we stipulated in our recommendation to Washington that, after three months of the revocation of the license, the firm have an opportunity to apply for reissuance of the license. However, the stipulation did not appeal to Mr. Hoover and the members of the legal department in Washington, and the license was revoked."

Officials of the People's Institute who are conducting the Food Scout Lunch for twenty-five boys of Public School 40 have found that the boys can do without white bread entirely. The officials say the boys never complain of war bread and have got so that they prefer it. One of the most popular meals offered to the boys is one without any meat—composed of potatoes, milk and cheese, and war bread.

Albert Manning on behalf of the Dairymen's League announced yesterday that steps had been taken to insure New York City's milk supply for next year through an option on 12,000 bushels of ensilage seed corn owned by the members of the Suffolk Seed Corn Association of Suffolk County. Through an agreement signed last week, the Dairymen's League, according to Mr. Manning, will be able to obtain the best proven variety of silage corn.

EXTOLS AMERICANS FOR FOOD ECONOMY

British Officer Says Few People Grasp Situation—'Amazing' Self-Sacrifice Here.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—Sir William Goode, who since the entry of the United States into the war has occupied the important post of liaison officer between the British Food Ministry and the United State Food Administration, discussed the present food situation in an address today to the London Rotary Club.

"Few people," said Sir William, "have yet grasped the fundamental fact that Great Britain still relies on the United States and Canada for 65 per cent. of her essential foodstuffs. Unless we can get this food, or nearly all of it, we shall peter out. As to how we get it, the popular idea seems to be that the United States is an up-to-date combination of miracle loaves and fishes and widow's cruse.

"What I want you to realize is the amazing way in which the energies and sentiments of the American people have been harnessed to a great national movement of organized self-sacrifice, so that the Allies can have food enough to carry on."

Sir William proceeded to give a detailed account of the steps taken by the United States toward food production and conservation.

"The cynic will tell you," he said, "that it is ridiculous to imagine that the American people, living in the midst of plenty, will make such sacrifices as these for the sake of their allies thousands of miles away. The cynic will relegate President Wilson and Herbert C. Hoover to the category of well-meaning idealists. But these voluntary measures can be tested by results.

"Early last month we received from Mr. Hoover a cablegram saying he found that as a result of the American conservation campaign he had 150,000,000 pounds of bacon and 25,000,000 pounds of frozen meat more than the British representatives in the United States had estimated as likely to be available. His offer was so unexpected that we had to hustle to get the finance and shipping for this windfall. Later on it turned out that the amount of frozen meat available was thousands of tons above the Hoover estimate.

"Except for the holdup of shipping in American ports due to congestion on the railways and blizzards, our bacon and meat shortage would long since have been eased by these shipments, which represent only a small percentage of the total sacrifices of the American people.

"It is lucky for us that a man like Mr. Hoover is at the helm of the allied food supply, and that behind him is a people willing to deny themselves so we may live to fight."

HUNGER IN HOLLAND MAY CAUSE REVOLT

HERE TO HELP BELGIANS

Model Garden Village for Widows and Orphans Is to be Built Near Antwerp After the War.

Fear of a revolution, inspired principally by the food shortage, is growing in Holland, according to Miss Hendricka A. C. van der Flier, daughter of the late Court Chaplain of the royal family of the Netherlands, who is in New York on a mission to raise funds for the Holland-American Homes for Belgian Widows and Orphans, of which she is Vice President.

"The food shortage has reached a very serious point," she said, "and processions of poor people demanding food and carrying the red flag are a common sight. The only bread now obtainable in the Netherlands is of such a quality as to be almost inedible, and with many comforts cut off and necessaries reduced, with the refugees from the various belligerent countries, mostly Belgians, crowding into Holland, until in many places the housing is far from sufficient for the population, the sufferings of all classes are very great.

"Talk of the prospect of revolution is to be heard very frequently, and so far as I can learn from connections in the other neutral countries of Europe the same thing is regarded as a possibility there, and for the same reasons. Apparently there is at present no revolutionary party with a revolutionary program; the manifestations of discontent are unconnected demonstrations, inspired by hunger. But there is much fear that if the war continues much longer this discontent may be organized by revolutionary elements, perhaps in concert with similar groups in other countries, and a general rising against Governments may take place.

Miss van der Flier said that the Dutch were at a loss to understand the American attitude toward shipments of wheat, as the quantity of food which Holland is able to export to Germany was very small. This export was necessary, she said, in order to get coal from Germany, which the Germans refused to send to Holland except in exchange for food, "and it is not very good coal at that," she said.

The Holland-American Homes for Belgian Widows and Orphans in whose interest Miss van der Flier visited America once before plans to erect at Deurne, near Antwerp, after the conclusion of the war and the restoration of the Belgians to their native land, a model garden village of brick cottages surrounded by individual flower and vegetable gardens, with a church, hospital, schools, playgrounds, public baths, &c., which is to provide homes and shelter for 300 Belgian widows, and 2,100 orphans. These mothers and children, to be chosen from among the refugees who are now being cared for in the Netherlands, are to be kept together, so that the children may have the benefit of the home training, and at the same time be educated in trades at the expense of the fund. It is estimated that the cost of the buildings and the necessary weekly allowances for about twenty years will be about $1,000,000.

A beginning of the fund has already been made in the Netherlands, but the increasing economic distress, unemployment, and rise in prices in that country has made it impossible to go much further there, and so the committee, which is authorized by King Albert of Belgium and organized under the patronage of Baron Fallon, the Belgian Minister to the Netherlands, has dispatched Miss van der Flier to this country. August Belmont, at 43 Exchange Place, is Treasurer of the American Committee.

After visiting the Belgian and Dutch Legations in Washington, Miss van der Flier will return to New York and establish permanent offices for the committee. She has also brought with her a considerable number of articles made from such materials as were available by interned Belgian soldiers or civilians, many of which possess a high degree of artistic merit. These will be placed on display in an exhibition later on and sold for the benefit of the fund. Dutch subscriptions have covered the entire expense of the work of organization and propaganda in this country, so that every cent contributed by Americans will go direct to relief work. The President of the Dutch Committee is Jonkheer Ruys de Beerenbrouck, Vice Chairman of the upper house of the Dutch Parliament, and among the members are J. H. Kann, Jonkheer J. O. de Jong van Beek en Donk, and Count O. van Bylandt of The Hague, and Jonkheer W. A. J. M. van Waterschoot van der Gracht of New York.

$2.75 WHEAT PROPOSED.

Senators Also to Discuss Increased Meat Production.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Inquiry will be begun tomorrow by the Senate Committee on Agriculture into the wheat situation, together with the problem of the advisability of enacting legislation to raise the minimum price of wheat from $2 a bushel, fixed in the food law of last Summer.

A resolution was offered today by Senator Gore, Chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, to increase the minimum price to $2.50 a bushel. Another was offered by Senator McCumber to raise it to $2.75 a bushel. Both resolutions were referred to the Committee on Agriculture.

Explaining the reason for the committee's investigation, Senator Gore said that farmers were complaining that the price of $2, with the advanced price of labor, together with the effects of the labor shortage, did not yield enough return. The wheat situation, he said, was liable to become serious through lack of labor. The Committee on Agriculture wants to ascertain what steps may be taken to provide help on the farms.

The suggestion of urging young women to take up farm work under Government auspices has been advanced by more than one Senator, and will comprise a feature of the committee's inquiry.

A new Congressional inquiry into the meat situation will also be made by the Agriculture Committee. Disturbed by reports of decreasing meat supplies, denuding of cattle ranches and reduced breeding of hogs, the committee has decided to investigate with a view to remedial measures. Western live stock producers are to be the first witnesses. Later meat packers may be called.

President Wilson was urged today by a delegation from the American National Livestock Association to adopt a national livestock policy covering production and distribution. It was suggested that a joint committee of the Department of Agriculture and the Food Administration formulate such a policy.

Bread Goes Up in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—Because wheat flour substitutes are costly and as hard to obtain as wheat flour itself, Chicago bakers have again raised the price of bread, 9-cent loaves advancing to 10 and 13-cent loaves to 15 cents. Food Administration officials announced today that they had not heard of the increase.

MANY WOMEN WORK FOR RAILROADS HERE

EXPERIMENT SUCCESSFUL

Work that is being done by the women of the State for the big railroad companies was discussed in one of the reports given at the seventh annual meeting of the Consumers' League of New York State, which held an all day meeting at the Sage Foundation Building, 130 East Twenty-second Street, yesterday, including a luncheon at the Madison Square Hotel.

"All the big railroads in New York State are using a certain proportion of women in their repair shops and yards," said Miss Anne Rhodes of the Americanization Committee, who has been investigating the subject. "The trial of women was begun at the suggestion of the Railroad War Board before the roads were taken over by the Government. It was thought that the work would be so different from the ordinary work of women that they should have a trial to see if they could make good. The experiment has proved a success and the general managers are well pleased with the results. The girls are enjoying the work and many of them are making more money than they have ever made before. There are so many different yards that I cannot tell how many women are employed, as I have only visited six of the Pennsylvania, five of the Erie, and two of the New York Central.

"The women work on all the lighter machines, including the drills and bolt cutting, and on the lathes in several instances they have shown exceptional skill. The general order has been that they should receive the same pay as the men who preceded them. They are started off at an initial wage of from 20 to 22 cents an hour. When they have learned the business they go on piece work, where they have the same opportunity as the men, and many of them are earning men's wages.

"In the yards the women clean up, sweep, and handle light freight such as small boxes of nuts and bolts, sometimes with lighter weight wheelbarrows prepared for them. The railroads have comfortable rest rooms for the women employes, and some of them have matrons or women supervisors. These women workers have not displaced men; they have taken the places of those that have been called away, and the men in some cases have been put on heavier jobs and the lighter work given the women."

Speaking of the women on the city street cars, Miss Rhodes said:

"In Brooklyn there are 1,000 women conductors, subway guards, car cleaners, and porters for the stations. The women porters, like the men, are all negroes. In Manhattan there are 300 girls working as conductors, and the companies have arranged rest rooms for them."

The league is standing behind a bill to prevent girls under 21 from entering messenger service, to regulate their hours of labor, and to keep them from night work. Miss Jeannie Minor, who reported on the girls in messenger service, said:

"There are eighty women in the messenger service in Manhattan and the Bronx. They earn $1.50 a day, and work seven days a week. As a rule, they do not work after 10 o'clock, though some of them work until 12. Messenger girls are also employed in Utica, Rochester, Buffalo, Albany, and Auburn. The Postal Telegraph employs girls in different places in small numbers, with nine in Buffalo and twelve in Rochester, all under 16 years."

Miss Josephine Goldmark spoke of Senator Wagner's Minimum Wage bill for women, which the league considers necessary as a war measure, and for which it is working. "It is already in force in thirteen States," said Miss Goldmark.

NEW 5-CENT ZONE TO TIMES SQUARE

Fulton Street and Brighton Beach Lines Will Transfer to Heart of Town.

JUST A SHORT WALK

Public Service Commission Settles Problem That Has Vexed It for Two Years.

By a system of transfers to be put in operation soon, passengers on the Fulton Street and Brighton Beach elevated lines in Brooklyn will be able to transfer to the Fourth Avenue subway and ride clear through to Times Square for 5 cents. The five-cent zone stops now at the Manhattan end of the Brooklyn Bridge. Connection between the elevated and subway lines will be had by means of a passageway and stairways connecting the Flatbush Avenue station of the Fulton Street line and the De Kalb Avenue station of the Brighton Beach line with the subway.

The recommendation was made yesterday to the Public Service Commission by Commissioner Whitney, who said that the matter had been troubling the commission for two years. He said that it would be the policy of the commission to extend the five-cent area as rapidly as possible. That this policy is appreciated by the public, he pointed out, has been amply proved since the Broadway subway has been in operation.

Commenting on some of the shortcomings of the Broadway line, Mr. Whitney explained that these were largely due to the fact that trains were operated before the line was finished, and that it was the pressure of public demand that started part of the line running at the earliest possible moment. Because there have been a great many complaints about the service on the Brighton Beach line, and because it serves a section so populous that the capacity of the line is frequently overtaxed, Mr. Whitney said:

"With respect to the Brighton Beach line, which, starting at Coney Island, traverses the great Flatbush region of Brooklyn, and the heart of the business section, a very substantial improvement will be afforded when the connection with the subway is made, toward the end of the year. When this connection is completed the Brighton Beach line will be four-tracked from Coney Island to the Prospect Park station.

"At that point the tracks will diverge and two tracks will continue as they do now to the Fulton Street elevated line at Franklin Avenue and the other two tracks will afford a conection with the Fourth Avenue subway, so that it will be possible for passengers to get access either by trains directly or by transferring at stations, up Broadway, or over the Manhattan Bridge through Canal Street as far north as Fifty-ninth Street and eastward through Fifty-ninth Street into Queens.

"Immediate advantage can be gained for Brighton passengers by the construction of a temporary passageway connecting the Flatbush Avenue station of the Fulton Street line with the De Kalb Avenue station of the Fourth Avenue subway. The mezzanine landing of the Flatbush Avenue station can be extended northward by a passageway over the curb of Flatbush Avenue and by dropping a stairway through the ventilating chamber to the mezzanine landing of the De Kalb Avenue station, which will make it possible for Brighton passengers to have an extension, at the present time, of the 5-cent area as far north as Times Square, and south to Rector Street by transferring again at Canal Street.

"In addition to these improvements, I believe that immediate improvement can be had in the service on the Fulton Street elevated line if a change in operation is made during the morning rush hours. Passengers on the Brighton line and on the city line are aware that during the evening rush hours the trains starting from Park Row, Manhattan, do not stop at the stations in lower Brooklyn. These stations are served by trains which start from the Brooklyn end of the Brooklyn Bridge and make the stops at these stations in lower Brooklyn, picking up passengers who either work in Brooklyn or who come from the Interborough subway at Borough Hall.

"In my opinion, if this method were reversed in the morning rush hours a great improvement could be had. That is to say, if the trains destined for Park Row do not stop at stations in lower Brooklyn and the trains for Brooklyn Bridge do stop at such stations, passengers could, at their home stations, take the proper trains and avoid the extreme amount of transferring that now takes place to Park Row trains at Flatbush Avenue, Duffield Street, and Boerum Place Stations. Such a method, in my opinion, would improve the running time of the Park Row trains. Such a plan cannot be put into effect until there is a thorough understanding of it by the public through adequate notices in the trains and on all of the stations."

The Chief Engineer of the Public Service Commission has been directed to make the necessary plans for the passageways and stairways so the transfer to the subway can begin as speedily as possible and the 5-cent zone can be extended to Times Square.

LOST GIFT FROM SOLDIER.

Miss Pelletier Offers $100 for Bag the Donor of Which Was Killed.

Miss D. L. Pelletier of 204 West Seventieth Street has inserted an advertisement in THE TIMES this morning offering a reward of $100 for the return of a gold mesh bag which she lost on Feb. 7 at the theatrical performance on the roof of the New Amsterdam Theatre. She said at her home last night that the bag was a gift from a friend who was later killed in battle as a member of the Canadian expedionary forces, and for that reason it had a priceless value to her. She said she thought it disappeared while the lights were dimmed. The bag contained a vanity case and was set with pearls and sapphires.

"I cannot tell any more about the bag," she said, "except that it means much more to me than the monetary value it has for the person who might happen to have it now. I will ask no questions whatever when the bag is returned."

FIGHT SALVATION DRAFT.

"Army" Officers Insist on Rights as Ministers.

The Salvation Army yesterday issued a statement protesting against the decision of the District Board of Appeals for the draft in New York City not to exempt officers of the Salvation Army as ministers of religion. Contrary rulings by the Secretary of War and an appointment of a Salvation Army officer as Chaplain were cited as evidence that the ruling was opposed to the position of the War Department. The views of the Salvation Army were expressed as follows:

"The decision of the United States District Board of New York City that officers of the Salvation Army are not entitled to exemption under the heading of 'minister of religion' is taken exception to by leading Salvation Army officials here. They claim that the board is misinformed in basing its decision on the grounds that Salvationists cannot perform marriage ceremonies and other rites of the church, and insist that Salvation Army officers have legal right to perform and have performed thousands of marriages."

At yesterday's meeting of the District Board George W. Wickersham protested against the decision to hold daily meetings next week to dispose of the 30,000-odd appeals pending, on the ground that on the present system of three meetings a week the board was passing on about 3,000 claims weekly, which was all that the clerical force could handle. Action on his proposal was deferred. The board yesterday passed all previous records in the number of cases decided, passing on more than 1,300 in the course of the day.

Sunday to Speak at Carnegie Hall.

The Rev. William A. Sunday, the revivalist, will return to New York next Monday night to make a patriotic speech at Carnegie Hall in connection with a song festival to be given by the Sunday Campaign Choir, under the direction of Tali Essen Morgan. There will be a trumpet quartet and several soloists. The tickets of admission, it was announced yesterday, may be obtained at Room 9025, 1 Madison Avenue, for 50 cents and $1.

Plan Bazaar for the Bronx.

Beginning on Feb. 16 and including Feb. 24 the Young Women's Hebrew Association of the Bronx will hold a bazaar at its headquaters, 890 Cauldwell Avenue. The proceeds will be used to increase the activities of the association. A number of novel features will be presented each evening.

MAJOR MURPHY JOINS PERSHING'S FORCES

His Great Red Cross Work in Europe Formally Taken Over by Major Perkins.

PARIS, Feb. 13.—Major Grayson M. P. Murphy, American Red Cross Commissioner to Europe since last May, reported yesterday to General Pershing for duty with the American Expeditionary Forces. Major James H. Perkins thereupon formally assumed control of the American Red Cross work in Europe.

The record made by the Red Cross under Major Murphy has been a notable feature of American participation in the war to date. He arrived in France on June 13, 1917, with a staff of seventeen persons. Today the total personnel in France is 2,375, of whom 1,325 are paid workers and 1,050 volunteers. The plans, either accomplished under Major Murphy or arranged by the Red Cross, for the work in France and Belgium call for the expenditure of 186,000,000 francs, (about $37,200,000.)

The work of the Red Cross accomplished since last June includes the support of nineteen American hospitals and numerous dispensaries, furnishing 15,851,000 francs to 288 French hospitals and relief organizations; founding four convalescent homes for American troops, eighteen canteens to provide food and lodging for soldiers going to and returning from the trenches, three rest stations along the lines of communication for American troops, and five recreation huts for American troops in hospitals, supplying 3,700 French military hospitals with surgical dressings and other needed equipment, building a factory for the manufacture of artificial limbs, and establishing five relief centres in France and Belgium. In the last five months 30,000 repatriated children have received medical attention and on the average 65,000 have been fed daily in canteens.

In recognition of the work accomplished during the period in which Major Murphy has been commissioner for Europe, General Pétain, Commander in Chief of the French Army, has written to the Red Cross as follows:

"The American Red Cross has powerfully contributed to maintain the morale of the French troops at a high level. The work of the American Red Cross, which every day extends its beneficent ramifications, has brought us, in addition to material help of the greatest value, the powerful strength of moral assistance, for which we are infinitely grateful."

HENNIG SAYS THIS IS HIS COUNTRY NOW

Munition Worker, Accused of Treason, Asserts He Hopes for German Revolution.

CHARGES FRAUD IN EXHIBIT

Tells Court That Receipt Is Not as Originally Made Out and That Line Was Inserted.

Testifying under crossexamination yesterday, Paul G. H. Hennig, who is on trial in the United States District Court in Brooklyn charged with treason in tampering with torpedo gyroscopes manufactured for the United States Navy by the E. W. Bliss Company, after having specifically denied all the accusations made against him, declared that he was a loyal citizen of this country and that he had no interest whatsoever in the Imperial Government of Germany. He expressed the sentiment that the sooner there was a revolution "over there" the better it would be.

"My country is the United States," said Hennig, when questioned by United States District Attorney France as to his loyalty. "I am a citizen and here I make my living."

"Did you ever feel that Germany should win the war?"

"No; never," answered the defendant. "I am not interested at all in the Imperial Government of Germany or its aims. I never felt or expressed any interest in the German Army. The quicker the rebellion comes over there the better."

Hennig added that as foreman of the gyroscope department of the Bliss Company he had discharged several men because they were "slackers." These men, he explained, had obtained employment at the works, where Government work was being done, apparently hoping thereby to evade the draft.

"I had no use for them, and don't you forget it," added the defendant.

Telling of his flight from Germany, witness asserted that he fled because a warrant was out for him for having said at a Socialist meeting: "Down with the Kaiser, up with the rebel flag, and give us an eight-hour day."

Mr. France was unsuccessful in efforts to show by the witness that Hennig did not come to this country as a political refugee, but that he really contemplated emigrating to America before making the public speech which offended the German authorities.

The witness said that on a number of occasions he had rejected and sent back to the storeroom gyro wheels which were imperfect.

"You sent defective parts back to the storeroom?" he was asked.

"Yes; but not to keep them there. I sent them back so that I would get proper credit for the parts returned. Had I not done so I would have been charged with them."

A receipt signed by two Inspectors at the Bliss plant and given to him for gyro wheels passed in his department was then shown to Hennig. This paper is an exhibit in the case as relating to the alleged "overt act" charged against the defendant. After examining it the defendant said that the paper was not as it was when it left his hands in the factory. It was customary, he said, for such receipts to be signed by only one Inspector, whereas the one in evidence bore the signatures of two Inspectors. As he remembered it, the receipt in question bore only one signature when delivered to him. The other signature, he said, must have been affixed after the paper went from his hands. Hennig further declared that the receipt as shown to him in court was not as originally made out. He called attention to the following line, which, he said, he believed was inserted after the paper left him: "21—176—1—2 gyro wheels."

Witness asserted that the line was not in his handwriting and was a forgery. After looking over the paper, Judge Chatfield passed it to the jurymen, who studied it carefully.

Counsel for Hennig asked him to take apart a model gyro bearing used by the prosecution to illustrate points as to defects. That there might be no "tricks" in cleaning the bearing, one of the jurors gave Hennig a newly laundered handkerchief to use. After rubbing off the dust and examining the "model," Hennig exclaimed: "Why, they haven't got a single part in evidence here that is as much off as this one."

The trial will be continued today.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 13.—Agents of the Department of Justice believe they struck German propaganda in this city a mortal blow by the raid they made today on the home of Adalbert Fischer, recently interned at Fort du Pont, Delaware, as a dangerous enemy alien. The raid disclosed large quantities of papers in the Germantown residence.

Special agents of the department were brought here from other cities to assist in the raid, which included the plant of the Shutte-Koerting Company at Twelfth and Thompson Streets.

Two squads of men armed with search warrants, swooped down upon the residence. A locked safe, in which Mrs. Fischer says there is $50,000 in gold, was brought to light. This has not yet been opened.

According to Frank Garberino, Chief of the Bureau of Investigation, the papers found in Fischer's house were of a nature that closely linked Fischer with German activities in this country and with officials high in the Imperial German Government. The money in the safe will be turned over to A. Mitchell Palmer, Custodian of Enemy Alien Property.

The Federal authorities are convinced that, like her husband, Mrs. Fischer is a dangerous enemy alien, but since under the law no woman may be interned, an attempt may be made to hold her on some technical charge. A bill is now before the Senate, permitting internment regardless of sex. Mr. Garberino says if this passes he will immediately cause her to be taken into custody. He says it can be proved that Fischer's home, the Schutte-Koerting plant, and the money were all owned by Germany. If so the properties also will be placed in the hands of the property custodian.

FLEW GERMAN FLAG IN TEXAS

Mayor and Ten Citizens of Fayetteville Held for the Act.

HOUSTON, Texas, Feb. 13.—W. C. Langlotz, Mayor, and ten citizens of Fayetteville, near here, pleaded not guilty today before the United States Commissioner to charges of espionage. They were held under bonds totaling $69,000.

The arrests followed the displaying of the German flag at the Germania Club at Fayetteville. Federal officials made the arrests, removed the flag and flagpole and brought the prisoners here.

Mayor Langlotz said the flag was displayed by mistake. With one exception all are American-born citizens.

THE HAGUE, Feb. 13.—The Vossiche Zeitung says that, according to a report received, one of the so-called German-Americans condemned in America is a German officer, a Captain Lieutenant of reserves, and was Director of a national bank.

Prompt Round Up of Those Who Failed to Record Themselves Under Law Is Looked For.

When the ten-day period allowed by the regulations of Attorney General Thomas W. Gregory closed at 10 o'clock last night 39,596 male German subjects above the age of 14 years had registered at the various police stations in New York City. Of these, 20,374 were in Manhattan, 9,350 in Brooklyn, 5,265 in the Bronx, 4,057 in Queens, and 550 in Richmond.

The total is nearly 7,000 less than the estimated number of Germans liable to registration, according to United States Marshal Thomas D. McCarthy, and the fact that the figures were not higher occasioned some surprise among officials. However, it was said that agents of the Department of Justice and detectives of the city police knew pretty well all of the German subjects in the city who were liable for registration, in view of the records taken during the application for passes to barred zones last Summer, and also the State military census of last June.

While no specific instructions have bene received from Washington, it was assumed yesterday by Government officials connected with the registration that today there will begin a general round-up of the Germans who have failed to register. An addition, perhaps of considerable numbers, is expected from men who have taken out their blanks but have failed to complete registration as yet, and some of these may be leniently dealt with if it is found that there was some good excuse for their course. All aliens who did not register are liable, however, to internment for the duration of the war.

The registration affidavit, which every German had to fill out and swear to before the police, called for a complete life history both before and since his coming to the United States. He had to give the date and place of his arrival in the United States and the name of the ship on which he came; every place he had lived, and the name and adress of all firms or individuals by whom he had been employed since Jan. 1 last.

He also had to furnish full account of any military or naval service he had ever performed and of any occasions on which he might have come into contact with the police; and he also had to be finger-printed and furnish five photographs for identification. One of these was affixed to the registration card which was given to each alien when the formalities had been completed.

To handle future action against enemy aliens, Assistant Attorney General William Wallace, Jr., was yesterday appointed by Attorney General Gregory a special assistant to United States District Attorney Francis W. Caffee. Mr. Wallace will have special charge of all prosecutions of enemy aliens in both the Southern and Eastern Districts of New York, embracing the entire city with Long Island, as well as in New Jersey.

Assistant United States District Attorney John C. Knox, who has been doing much of the work of prosecuting enemy aliens in the Southern District of New York, said yesterday that the new appointment would much facilitate the work of the Federal District Attorney's office, since the present staff had been so busy with these prosecutions that they had not had as much time as was desirable for other work. He also said that there would be much advantage in having the cases against enemy aliens in the widest expanse of the metropolitan district under a single head.

Registration in Hoboken, which before the war was almost a German port from the point of view of population, closed at 8 o'clock last night and within two hours the police had arrested five Germans who had not registered. One of these, Paul Jaeger of 40 Newark Street, took out a registration blank several days ago but refused to have his photograph taken, as the regulations required, and last night after time was up he came to Police Headquarters and asked the authorities what they were going to do about it. They put him in a cell.

There was a considerable exodus of German subjects from Hoboken after the town was made a port of embarkation, and it is believed by the police and Federal agents that not more than fifty or sixty German subjects have failed to register. These, it was said, can easily be hunted down.

27 Germans Held in Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 13.—Fifteen Germans were locked up in the county jail today by agents of the Department of Justice for refusing to take out zone permits. Twelve other Germans were also being held at the jail for failure to have permits in their possession. The Federal agents have recommended to Washington that the twenty-seven men be interned for the period of the war.

PRISON FOR SHIP CAPTAIN.

Must Serve Twenty Days for Failing to Register Under the Draft.

Alexander A. Tanos, Captain of a vessel owned by the Pan American Transportation Company, who was arrested in Porto Rico on the charge of failing to register for military service and was brought here on Monday, when arraigned yesterday before Judge Edwin S. Thomas in the Federal District Court was sentenced to twenty days' imprisonment. Assistant United States District Attorney Axman said in court that Tanos was arrested because he was acting suspiciously near Government property.

He added that in the course of a long surveillance by agents of the Department of Justice it had been learned that Tanos had been arrested and kept in detention for two months last Summer at Norfolk for taking his vesel into restricted waters, that he had been arrested in Washington for carrying a revolver, and that he had endeavored to enlist in the naval intelligence service. At that time, Mr. Axman said, Tanos had declared that he was of Italian descent, but later admitted that he was born in Budapest, though claiming to be of French parentage. Judge Thomas, said, however, that he could be guided only by the charge before him. Tanos is now in the Tombs.

COURT FREES ILLUSTRATOR.

Masters Was Sketching Train from Railroad Bridge When Arrested.

After Magistrate Nolan, in the Men's Night Court, was told that the United States District Attorney's office was satisfied that Frank B. Masters of 121 West Twenty-third Street was what he represented himself to be, an illustrator, the Court dismissed the complaint of disorderly conduct against Masters.

Masters was arrested Tuesday night by Special Policeman Walter McIntyre, employed by the New York Central Railroad, who saw Masters sketching while on a bridge overlooking the railroad's property at North River and Sixty-seventh Street. Masters said he had been engaged by the United States Chamber of Commerce to sketch a moving railroad train for a magazine cover.

ENRIGHT CALLS FOR MORE THAN ARRESTS

Commissioner Warns Detectives That They Have Got to Show Efficiency.

MUST MEET REAL TEST

Rating in Department, He Adds, Will Be Determined by Individual Ability and Efficiency.

Police Commissioner Enright announced last night that he had decided to apply the merit system to the Police Department by exculding from it any question concerning the number of arrests which may be credited to any member of the department and that hereafter the merit rating would be determined upon the basis of individual ability and efficiency. His first notification of this to the men was made yesterday afternoon to 100 detectives attending a meeting of the Detectives' Endowment Association at headquarters.

"To hold your jobs as detectives you have got to show something more than merely a large number of arrests to your credit," the Commissioner told them. "There must be, in efficient police work, other good qualifications beside the mere matter of arrests, and the man who cannot show something of greater value than routine duty in gathering in prisoners cannot expect to go on holding his job on that ground alone."

The Commissioner intimated to reporters that detectives who failed to meet the efficiency test would be sent back to precinct police work after being given a fair chance to make good. None of the men of the department, he said, could expect either promotion or assignment to higher grade work unless he showed special ability in the work he was now doing.

"I told the detectives just what I expected of them and just what they may expect of me," said Commissioner Enright. "I believe in the merit system generally—when it is a real merit system, but I do not think the question of the number of arrests made in a certain period should be necessarily a cause for reward. A man may make an arrest without exercising any special degree of ability, while another man may risk his life in a very difficult job and yet both have been rated alike. I do not consider that fair."

Commissioner Enright increased the staff of Mrs. Ellen A. O'Grady, Fifth Deputy Commissioner, by assigning four women yesterday to assist her in looking after missing girls, white slavers, rowdies and annoyers and insulters of women on the streets and in welfare work generally. These new members are matrons who have been acting detectives with Inspector "Dan" Costigan's vice squad. They are Mrs. Isabella Goodwin, Adele D. Priess, Maud M. Leslie, and Ada Brady. In reference to the transfer of these women from Costigan's staff, Mr. Enright said these were the only changes made and that the report that he had "broken up" Costigan's staff and had made it impossible for the latter to continue his work against gambling and disorderly characters was untrue.

"I was very much disturbed by that report published in some of the newspapers," said the Commissioner. "All that was done was to merge two squads and place the scattered members of the two staffs under Costigan's command."

These transfers were ordered yesterday: Captain William F. Peabody from the Central Office to the 276th Precinct, North Prince Street, Flushing; Captain Charles E. Northrup, from Flushing to the 172d Precinct, Lawrence Avenue, Brooklyn, and Captain Michael J. Reidy from Lawrence Avenue Station to the Beach Street Station, Manhattan. These changes were due to the retirement today of Captain Edward V. Hughes, at his request.

Commissioner Enright will reorganize the Home Defense League, which he has ordered changed to the Police Reserve of New York. The force, which now consists of two classes, will be merged in one class and made ready for regular or emergency work. Men whose work or physical condition prevents them from active duty and enrolled in Class B, are to be dropped.

URGES LEGISLATURE TO TAKE UP FRAUDS

WHITMAN NOMINATES HILL

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 13.—Senator George F. Thompson of Niagara served notice on the Senate today that he intended to press his resolution calling for a legislative investigation of Republican primary frauds in the late Mayoralty election in New York City.

That the move will meet with determined opposition from the Senate leader, Elon R. Brown, and Republican Senators who follow his leadership, and that the Democratic members of the upper house are not overanxious to have the inquiry transferred from the District Attorney's office to the Legislature, was indicated by the trend of a debate in the Senate today.

As the Senate was about to adjourn for the day Senator Thompson moved that his resolution introduced on Monday night, in which District Attorney Swann of New York is called upon to furnish the Senate with information regarding the progress of his investigation into the primary frauds, be set down for debate next Monday evening. Robert F. Wagner, minority leader of the Senate, with some show of resentment, told the Senator from Niagara that District Attorney Swann was a conscientious and competent public official who had prosecuted this particular inquiry with commendable zeal, and undoubtedly would be glad to post the Senate on what he had done unless this should lead to the disclosure of evidence which in the interest of justice should not be disclosed at this time.

The resolution was set down for consideration on Monday.

Governor Whitman today sent to the Senate the nomination of Charles B. Hill of Buffalo to succeed Seymour Van Santwood as member of the Public Service Commission for the First District. Senator Gibbs of Erie moved for the immediate confirmation, but on objection of Senate Leader Senator Brown the nomination was sent to the Finance Committee. Mr. Hill has resigned as one of the elective City Commissioners of Buffalo to accept his new post. He was Commissioner of Finance and Account. Mr. Hill is a Republican.

Legislative leaders are now giving serious consideration to the bill of Senator F. Thompson consolidating the present two Public Service Commissions. The bill was to have been taken up today by the Public Service Committee of the Senate, but was put over until next Wednesday. Senator Robert R. Lawson of Kings was among those who expressed an opinion today that the bill might be whipped into shape and passed.

Senator Charles F. Murphy of Kings introduced a bill today amending the New York City charter to provide that applications by dismissed members of the police and fire departments for a rehearing of charges leading to their dismissal or reduction in rank must be made within one year after the amendment, embodied in the bill, takes effect, if the dismissal or reduction in rank had occurred prior to its enactment.

On behalf of labor organizations, Minority Leader Wagner introduced three bills, one of which embodies a declaration that "labor is not a commodity," which labor men for many years have sought to have embodied in the law of the State. The bills exempt labor organizations and agricultural and horticultural associations from the anti-monopoly provisions contained in the Donnelly Anti-Trust act. Indictment or trial of an organization for any agreement made with a view to lessening hours of labor or improving labor conditions is declared illegal, unless the result sought would constitute grounds for criminal charges if attained by a single individual. The bills also prohibit the granting of injunctions in restraint of picketing or holding meetings, unless it be specifically shown that the injunction is necessary to prevent the destruction of property which must be described in the application.

A bill introduced by Assemblyman William C. Amos would broaden the divorce law and permit action for divorce to be brought on other than the present statutory ground. Such actions could be maintained under the Amos bill for extreme cruelty and inhuman treatment, habitual ungovernable temper, habitual intemperance, desertion, conviction of a felony, and where the contracting parties are within degrees of consanguinity prohibited by law, or where the defendant has obtained a divorce in another State or country.

ODELL NOW ICE CONTROLLER

ALBANY, Feb. 13.—The bill naming ex-Governor Benjamin B. Odell State Ice Controller, with powers to contract for the harvesting of an extra quantity of natural ice and to regulate the traffic in that commodity, became a law today with the approval of Governor Whitman. The bill was passed in the Senate and Assembly only yesterday.

The enactment of the bill was prompted by a realization that there would be a shortage of ammonia, which is an agent in the manufacture of ammunition as well as ice, and that an extra large supply of natural ice would be required to tide the people in New York City over the hot Summer months.

The bill gives the State Ice Controller power to contract with the ice harvesters along the Hudson and Mohawk Rivers for 2,000,000 tons in excess of the normal supply, under State guarantee assuring them of reasonable rates and compensation from the State for their unsold surplus at the end of the season. In order to prevent competition by the manufacturers of artificial ice, the bill contains a provision that no artificial ice shall be placed on the market in New York City, Long Island, and the Hudson River counties, except under a license from the Ice Controller.

ASK WAGE INCREASE OF $82,000,000

Railway Shop Unions Also Want Similar Advances Given to Unorganized Workers.

FREIGHT RATES MAY GO UP

Commission Is Told Roads' Lack of Preparation for Winter Caused Traffic Jam.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—The first official indication of what proposed railroad wage increases would cost was given at today's hearing before the Railroad Wage Commission, when J. A. Franklin presented the claims of the railway employes' department of the American Federation of Labor.

"Figuring an average of 33 1-3 per cent. increase on the flat increases asked, the additional cost would be $82,000,000 annually," Secretary Lane, Chairman of the commission, computed.

Mr. Franklin said the estimate seemed correct based upon increases for 250,000 organized men. He also had suggested that any increases should apply to unorganized workers of the same trades, numbering about 200,000, who were not figured in the rough calculation. The wage basis asked was $6 a day for skilled men such as carmen, machinists, and blacksmiths, $4.50 a day for helpers, and time and a half for overtime, Sunday and holiday work.

None of the witnesses before the commission has submitted estimates of what the increases requested would cost, all apparently taking the position of A. B. Garretson of the conductors, who said that it did not matter what the cost would be since the increases were essential to maintain the standard of living, and that if an industry did not maintain the men serving it the industry did not deserve to survive.

Men Driven to Other Industries.

Low wages have been blamed by the witnesses for the exodus of railroad workers to other industries, with the result that many skilled men have been lost. Mr. Franklin said the various unions he represented had lost 15 per cent. of their membership to shipyards and still others to munition factories.

Warren S. Stone of the engineers told the commission that never before this Winter had the railroads entered the bad weather season with equipment in such "rotten" condition that this was the cause of the great traffic congestion, and that lack of skilled men in shops was responsible for curtailment of output there to 60 per cent. of normal. He said there would be no shortage of engines if provision were made to care for motive power. To show the patriotism of the engineers and the part they played in national emergencies, Mr. Stone said the War Department had asked the brotherhood to furnish fifty men for tank service and 1,000 engineers for transportation service in France, and that he would furnish the names of men available. During the Mexican trouble, Mr. Stone said, the War Department also asked the brotherhood for men who spoke Spanish and were competent to move troop trains. He said he furnished the names of more than 300.

A. E. Barker, speaking for the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employes, said his men were on the verge of quitting because they saw living costs mounting steadily without advance in wages.

"For the last twelve months the railroads have not been able to get men to keep up the standard of their roadbed, one of the most vital parts of any system," he asserted. "Of course, a track runs down gradually, but it will take many more men now to make repairs than would have been required if thousands of the crews had not been attracted to other labor by better pay."

J. B. Parsons and F. R. Weller of the American Association of Engineers said the roads were handicapped for professionally trained engineers, to whom were offered jobs at $40 to $50 a month after spending four years in college and perhaps going in debt several thousand dollars for a technical education.

P. F. Richardson of Chicago said men in the mechanical and bridge building trades were leaving to take $1 to $2 a day more wages in other employment.

Mr. Franklin's representations to the commission resulted in the first mention of increased freight rates as a means of providing the revenue necessary to meet the new expenses.

"These increases must be paid by the shippers," observed Chairman Lane, "but I don't think you should be barred from a reasonable wage because it might entail an increase in freight rates."

Comparison of railroad wages with the pay in other industries brought suggestions from the Commissioners that the large wages in shipyards and munitions factories were due to abnormal conditions and were temporary. The witnesses did not agree. Mr. Franklin said shipbuilding certainly was good for several years more and called attention to increases in pay in coal mines, which he said made common labor worth more than skilled labor in railroad shops.

Increases suggested today were 40 per cent. for mechanical employes and bridge builders; $3.25 to $3.50 a day for section men, who now get $2.10; section foremen, $110 to $140 a month, instead of $55 to $90; masons, $5.50 a day; mason foremen, $150 a month; interlocking signal builders, $5 a day; carmen, blacksmiths, machinists, &c., minimum of 75 cents an hour, and helpers, 56¼ cents an hour, no increase to be less than 25 cents an hour; engineers, a minimum of $6 a day. All urged time and a half for overtime.

The civil engineers did not ask any specific increase, calling attention to the fact that they were unorganized, and suggesting merely that just consideration should be given to their case.

Bankers and Business Men

Learn This Great Truth Right Now!

In many cases, of course, they are amply secured by the insurance carried, but within the last three years buildings, machinery, and stocks of all kinds have almost doubled in value. A building with its machinery and contents which three years ago was worth $100,000 is today possibly worth $200,000. The owner of that business three years ago, on the basis of the 80% coinsurance clause in his policy, would have carried $80,000 of insurance.

Today, on the same basis, that owner should carry $160,000.

Many business firms have not thus increased their insurance in direct proportion to the increase in their values. Consequently, on the basis of their present values, they are wofully underinsured. If they have a fire, they will find to their dismay that they can rightfully collect less money now from the insurance companies on any loss less than 80% of value of property, than they would have collected on that same loss three years ago.

Example of 80% Coinsurance Clause

3 Years Ago—	Value of building	$100,000
	Insurance carried	80,000
	Loss	40,000
	Paid by insurance company		$40,000
NOW—	Value of building	$200,000
	Insurance carried	80,000
	Paid by insurance company		$20,000

Banks are today advancing money to numerous concerns to provide them with the materials for undertaking large Government contracts. In many cases the bankers are safeguarding themselves on these loans by requiring such borrowers to take out Use and Occupancy insurance policies.

Both as regards the coinsurance clause situation and this Use and Occupancy insurance matter, bankers can further protect themselves, save their clients' money, and at the same time perform a valuable public benefaction, by pointing out that the man who has no sprinkler protection can more than quadruple the amount of his insurance without increasing its cost by installing automatic sprinklers. He can also reduce the cost of Use and Occupancy insurance 40 to 90 per cent. if he will install sprinkler equipment.

Prevent heavy property loss to the owner.

The loss record of Grinnell Automatic Sprinkler Systems in 20,000 reported fires is less than $280 per fire.

Grinnell Automatic Sprinklers today protect over two thousand million dollars of business property—more than all other sprinkler systems combined.

GERMAN OFFENSIVES IN THE SPRING.

The season approaches when operations on the long western front from the North Sea to the Adriatic will become practicable. Nothing is spoken of but a powerful German offensive to be launched at the allied armies in France. It is assumed that they will attempt no forward movement, playing a waiting game until a great American army is ready to join in a counteroffensive. For either political or military reasons, the Germans have encouraged the view that they will deliver their great blow "somewhere in France" when the ground hardens in the Spring.

As a matter of fact, the weather conditions have been favorable of late for a preliminary assault, but nothing beyond "nibbling" has developed. Last year at this time General HAIG was striking hard almost daily and threatening the Hindenburg line. He took many prisoners and gained a good deal of ground. But even in the Cambrai sector, where the Germans can use strategic roads and railways to assemble masses of troops rapidly, and where they counterattacked and drove BYNG back nearly three miles, there are only artillery duels now. It would, of course, be sound tactics to suspend the blow until there is no mud on the western front to bog the guns that must follow on the heels of advancing infantry—if, that is to say, the Germans are planning a great movement to break through at the weakest link in the line.

A prisoner taken to British Headquarters discloses the intention of the Germans to begin an offensive, possibly not the great stroke, in March; at what point he was not prepared to say. Much is made of this communication. It might well be that the rank and file are instructed to talk to their captors about the coming German offensive in France. But "abnormal train movements," the arrival of more guns, and constant training of units are reported to complete the case for an attack in force. It may come at any time when the weather conditions are kind, but the puzzle is that it should be ostentatiously advertised. Hitherto publicity has not been a German card in the military game.

By this time the enemy, beaten back from the Marne, headed off from Calais, foiled at Verdun many times, and driven from concrete intrenchments time and again, should have no illusions about the prowess of the Allies, and might be expected to hold their defensive qualities in great respect. The breaking down of an offensive in France in 1918 would register the failure of Germany as a military power in battle with the Western Allies. Would the cost be worth while when the Germans have lately proved their skill in a political offensive that has eliminated Russia from the war? German propaganda may be more formidable than German powder. Is it not conceivable that the Kaiser may elect to strike again in Italy when he has made his combinations? There he might play both the military and the political game with some chance of success. In the last months of 1917 the Austro-Germans, after driving the Italians from the Isonzo to the Piave, fought their way through the Venetian Alps to positions only ten miles from Bassano in the plain. Storms and deep snow were more of an impediment to further advance than the resistance of the Italians, although they must have credit for heroic exploits.

That the Austro-German hosts, remarkably strong in artillery, will not abandon the Italian campaign may be assumed. If it is decided to bring up new divisions when railroad communications are fully restored, there will be another push for the plains from the mountains. From the Trentino the Austrians, without German assistance on any considerable scale, almost reached the low country south of Pasubio in their May offensive in 1916. CADORNA saved himself only by organizing a new army at Vicenza. It was to relieve the strain on the Italians that the battle of the Somme was planned. Another offensive in the Venetian Alps would be popular with the Austrians, whose successes were gained further west than the Brenta Valley, where the Austro-Germans were launching attacks early in the Winter. If the interest of the Austrians in the war is to be maintained, the Germans can hardly afford to abandon the offensive which forced the Isonzo and drove down in a flanking operation nearly to the coveted plains and their strategic railways.

A sweeping triumph in Italy could be turned to political advantage. There the enemy's front is the line of less resistance, compared with the elaborate intrenchments of the Allies in France. A feint in France and a powerful blow in Italy is a German design not to be overlooked by the Interallied War Council and its commanders. It has, of course, received their serious attention.

THE GOOD AND THE BAD AT ALBANY.

The heathen continue to rage at Albany. Of Senator BROWN, who has introduced a resolution for the appointment of a committee to revise the primary law, only wickedness was to be expected. He is the known inveterate foe of Virtue and Governor WHITMAN. Better hopes once clustered around Speaker SWEET, but he is a backslider now. Pernicious activity to corrupt the innocence of the Granges and the farmers is renewed. The high cost of the direct primaries is set before Agricola. Is any price, doubled though the price of this Great Boon be by woman suffrage, too high to pay for the direct primary? And, since the direct primary is the immediate jewel of Governor WHITMAN's soul, who but a churl would grudge the costliest valuation of that jewel?

Nobody but the people and the iniquitous, as distinct from the truly good, politician desires the return of the State Convention for the nomination of State elective officers. Therefore the direct primary is the sacred vehicle of the people's will, and the Governor will launch the thunder of his veto if the Legislature is presumptuous enough to lay hands upon the ark. The direct primary has been good to him, and he will stand by it and himself. When the Assembly of Notables was convened, in the hope that the French privileged classes would consent to resign their privileges, some wag symbolized the occasion by telling a fable about the rustic who called his fowls together and told them: "I'm going to eat you." "But we don't want to be eaten." "You wander from the point." The fable applies to the "reactionary" Republican legislators who seek to deprive the Governor of one of the most precious parts of his stock in trade.

Of course such beggarly considerations as the restoration of representative government will occur only to narrow minds. Political finesse, political farce-comedy, the ambitions of divers gentlemen, the unhallowed joy of the unregenerate to explode the tires of the Governor's machine, 1918 model and 1920 model—these are among the noble motives that may be detected in this fight between True Badness and True Goodness. And what seer can look into the entrails of Time Future and say from what appointments to office or consent to bills some of the legislative naggers of the Governor may yet abate a possibly factitious ardor against the direct primary? The merits of the case have mighty little to do with it in the view of experienced practical statesmen.

Not of such is the Governor. He is a romanticist, a dreamer, on whom throng visions of 1918 and 1920, whether from the ivory gate or the horn, who knows? He loves the direct primary officially, prohibition unofficially. Won't his Dry friends rally around him? They are so eager not to consult the will of the people as to the prohibition amendment that they must be deeply attached to that curious popular oracle, the direct primary. At any rate, he would be a too-quick despairer that would not cling to Governor WHITMAN so long as that old soldier of reform, Mr. GEORGE W. ALDRIDGE, doesn't desert.

THE SHIPPING STRIKES.

The shipping strikes are an unfortunate incident of labor's loyalty week, which was marred also by other unfortunate incidents on the part of wage payers, oftener called capitalists. So far as such incidents are of the same quality, they call for the same condemnation. Profiteering by labor and capital is equally obnoxious and contrary to public interest. Neither excuses the other. Secretary of Labor WILSON took the right stand when he declared that, instead of there being a fair division of such "swag," there ought to be no "swag" to divide. To clear the ground for speaking specifically regarding the shipping strikes, it may be said at once that the profiteering capitalist seems the worse offender, for he has not the excuse of necessity. The capitalist can go without profit better than the wage earners can meet the rising cost of living. But the striker is equally defenseless against condemnation when his strike is more unfair than what he strikes against.

A strike to enforce on the Atlantic Coast the wage level of the Pacific Coast can be justified only if the Pacific Coast wages are either fair in themselves or procured by fair methods. Notoriously, the Pacific wages are exorbitant and extorted by methods which are immoral and dangerous to democracy. Dynamite has been used freely. Jobs have been confined to unionists. And when the union scale has been established by intimidation the workers have "struck on the job," that is have not given a fair day's work for the wage conceded under duress. When some Americans will not allow other Americans to work, when American workers on their own terms reduce their output as the wage is raised, the excuse that capital also profiteers is not admissible. When the country's life is at stake, it is not tolerable that men whose wages have been raised above their necessities should work only part time, or just enough to meet their necessities.

It has been put in evidence at Washington that 106 shipbuilding companies have lost on Government work the labor of 20,000 men for a month, or 596,902 days. In troop transportation that equals eighty voyages of a 4,000 ton ship. In terms of cargo, it means the loss of 320,000 tons, and each American soldier in France needs thirty tons a year of supplies and munitions. The shipping strikes have obstructed the dispatch to our allies of ten millions of bushels of foodstuffs. We know what the Germans think of strikes in wartime. HINDENBURG's words may be adapted to unfair strikes here: "Every hour you "lose means the weakening of America's attack on the enemies of democracy. You are committing a "crime against our army and an act "of cowardice against your brethren "in the front trenches."

Mr. GOMPERS's words are even stronger than HINDENBURG's, when speaking of the Russian Bolsheviki. He now has opportunity to speak in suitable terms of the American allies of the Bolsheviki. Mr. GOMPERS has repeatedly pledged support to the Government's program in general, and to shipbuilding in particular, and has won respect and praise by it. If the Federation wishes to retain the respect it has recently won, it should discipline the unions in affiliation with it, when they offend against country and morality.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Throughout the country there will be heartfelt rejoicing at Colonel ROOSEVELT's delivery from the pain and peril of serious illness. The physicians in attendance now give assurance that he is on the way to recovery, that the danger is past.

Ex-President ROOSEVELT has been a great figure in our national history; he is an inspiring force, a compelling force. The value of his service to the people of the United States during the last three years in arousing them to a sense of the national peril and of their duty is beyond all estimate. They will pray for his speedy return to good health and his old exuberance of spirit, that he may long enjoy that strength of mind and body that has enabled him to perform such labors in the common interest of all the people.

LIBERTY BOND SALES.

The daily new "low" for the Liberty loans signifies nothing regarding the payment of either interest or principal according to the terms of the contract between the lender and the borrower. The real value of the bonds is the discounted present worth of the money lent to the Government. It is no part of the Government's contract to maintain the market price of the bonds, although it might be a prudent thing to do for the sake of future loan campaigns. Government bonds are not a speculation. The loss on the principal is small in itself and nothing for a patriot to regret, considering that the depression is as sure to disappear as peace is to come. The prospective premium or profit on the Liberty loans is no more the inducement to take or hold the bonds than the present depression is a reason for selling them. The winning of the war is the motive.

The selling of the bonds is the means whereby the lenders of the money reconsider and undo their arrangement with the Government. As THE ANNALIST puts it, the takers of the bonds are in the position of a landlord who has rented premises which he wishes to recover before the term expires. Naturally he has to make some sacrifice to those who have rented his premises, and he will not make the sacrifice unless he sees recompense. The sellers of the bonds are those who wish to recall their money for other uses, either for reasons of profit or necessity. No sympathy should be wasted on bondholders who want to get a better return for their money than the defeat of Kaiserthum. They are judges of their own interests. It is different with those whose necessities compel an unwilling sacrifice. It would seem that Government might do for them what it is not called upon to do for all.

The support of the general market is not to be expected as a duty, although prudent to some extent in market practice. But it would seem that Government might do for original subscribers what it ought not to do for buyers at a discount. That is to say Government might do for all who take bonds direct from it what it already does for the holders of the W. S. S., that is offer to return the money upon notice of necessity, but with a reduction of interest. That would give the bonds value in the hands of the original holder which would not pass to a market buyer. It would be both an inducement to subscribe and not to part with the bonds too readily. It has not been heard that the redemption privilege of the thrift stamps has been abused. It is probable that the redemption of bonds from original takers would not be large, and the lifting of such sales from the market would have the effect of sustaining the price by preventing depression.

"CONTINUOUS PRAYING."

A writer in The Woman Citizen gives a singular specimen of woman citizenship and devoted undiluted patriotism. Hear this affecting plea:

> Release the unenfranchised women from their continuous praying that they may not be obliged to carry the double burden of work for the ballot with the exacting work of patriotic service.

Notice the neat assumption that the unenfranchised women, great numbers or the majority of whom don't want to vote, that all women who have not the ballot are taking part in this "continuous praying." Observe, too, that any woman who groans under the double burden is free to give up the not important part of it. What ought this superfluous, and, in the present condition of the country and the world, impertinent work for woman suffrage be to any patriotic woman or man now and so long as the war lasts? Nothing and less than nothing. Beat Germany, that is the one thing needful, and nothing else matters by the side of it.

Probably only a few irrepressible woman suffragists are in this "continuous praying" band. In their enthusiasm they forget values. They forget that they are unconsciously furnishing an argument against their cause and making its wiser friends impatient or irritated. There is a measure in things.

"Men of America," The Woman Citizen writer continues, "the eyes of "the world are upon you. The new-"born Russian Republic watches "you." How eager the men of America, outside of the Socialists, the domestic Bolsheviki, must be for the good opinion of the new-born or still-born Russian Republic!

GERMANY'S WARNING.

The new agreement with Holland provides that nearly all of the eighty-two Dutch ships which have been lying at our ports for seven months shall go into service for our Government and the Allies. There are indications now that the number of Dutch vessels taken over for such service will be considerably increased. Our cable dispatches from London on the 11th concerning negotiations there between Mr. SHERRILL (representing the Allies as well as the War Trade Board,) and Holland's Special Commissioner spoke of the ships released here, and added: "The entire "residue of the Dutch merchant marine will be placed at the disposal of "the Allies for transportation needs "outside of the war and danger zone." This appears to be confirmed in a statement published by the Netherlands Foreign Office, that ships now in Dutch harbors will be so used.

Of course these plans are not approved in Berlin, and warning has been given to Holland in an authorized interview, published by Dutch newspapers, with Baron VON DEM BUSSCHE-HADDENHAUSEN, second in rank at the German Foreign Office. Germany must regard with grave concern, he says, a situation created when the Allies take hundreds of thousands of tons of shipping from a neutral country, to be used for their purpose, which is Germany's defeat. He advises Holland to be very careful. "We "must protect ourselves, for our national life is at stake."

Such a warning was to be expected. So far as it relates to the sea, it means that submarines will sink the ships if they can be reached. The Fridland, carrying grain for the Belgian Relief Commission, was torpedoed on the 7th. But Holland needs the food which she is to receive in return for use of the ships, and they would be in danger if there were no new agreement with this country and the Allies, for more than 150 Dutch vessels have already been destroyed by Germany. And the torpedoes will be at work while Germany is receiving food from Holland. The Dutch Foreign Office says the report that exports to Germany are to cease is unwarranted. They will not be discontinued. It is difficult, however, to see how Holland, whose people are suffering from shortage of such supplies, can now spare food for the nation that may sink ships bringing grain to her from America.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

An Obvious Duty Is Neglected.

It is true, as contended by JOHN T. ADAMS, the suddenly famous descendant of so many New England ancestors, that too much and the wrong kind of importance has been ascribed by political opponents to the letter written by him from Germany to his home paper in 1914. That document does make, indeed, decidedly unpleasant reading in these days, but it only shows that at the time when it was written Mr. ADAMS fell headlong into the trap set by the German Government for the catching of its own subjects, and his guilelessness was no different from that displayed by many, perhaps a majority, of the Americans who happened to be living in Germany at that time.

Like the Germans themselves, those Americans believed the only explanation of the war that came to their ears, and the credulity of men like Mr. ADAMS for statements made by great officials whom they had much reason then to respect was increased because there lingered in their minds the tales about the British prison ships, the doings of the Hessians, and the Indian massacres that had been implanted there by their school histories of the Revolution.

It was, therefore, in innocence, probably, though nobody could say in wisdom, that Mr. ADAMS wrote the dreadful nonsense he did. Should he write it today, or anything remotely like it, he would demonstrate the truth of all, and more than all, that anybody has said in derogation of his patriotism. And he does not write it. His friends must regret, however, that he has made no clear or explicit repudiation of the illusions from which, like so many Americans abroad and too many here, he did not escape till later. He has, to be sure, declared that he is now loyal to the allies of the United States as well as to the United States itself, and presumably he is, but, to remove all excuse for doubt, he should perform a public act of contrition—should admit how utterly and deplorably wrong he was, and humbly apologize to those whom he called "the whole gang of devilish conspirators" for no better reason than that he had been deceived—so easily!—by a gang to which his characterization would apply as well now as it would have done in 1914 and ever since.

Mathematics Declared Injurious!

If books not about the war were receiving attention nowadays, there would be a good deal of talk about "South Wind," by NORMAN DOUGLAS. There would be, that is, if, as must be hoped, the American reading public includes a considerable number of people appreciative of humor and wisdom in combination—humor gently cynical, but none the less real, and wisdom intentionally fantastic and dressed in paradox, but still full of suggestion. The book is "picaresque" in an extremely modern fashion, and it deals with the queer doings of some queer folk living on an island off the coast of Italy. Some of them are natives, but the leading characters are the members of a little foreign "colony," composed chiefly of English and Americans. Prominent among them is a philosopher, who, is somewhat bibulous at times, but evidently the favorite spokesman of the author's own ideas, and it is he that says most of the things that render the book remarkable—"different."

For instance, he makes a violent attack on the study of mathematics, which is so much revered. "Mathematics!" he exclaims scornfully. "A mediaeval halo clings to this subject, which as training for the mind has no more value than whist playing." And again. "As a training in intelligence it is harmful: it teaches a person to underestimate the value of evidence based on other modes of ratiocination. It is the poorest form of evidence—sheer verification."

That is absurd or not, according to the way it is taken, but, on reflection, anybody can see the element of truth in it—the unlikeness of the mathematician's methods to those by which the greater part of life's decisions are and must be reached. There is to be recalled, too, as relevant to the valuation of mathematics, what BACON writes in "The Advancement of Learning":

> For it being the nature of the mind of man (to the extreme prejudice of knowledge) to delight in the spacious liberty of generalities, as in a champain region, and not in the enclosures of particularity, the mathematics of all other knowledges were the goodliest fields to satisfy that appetite.

That isn't far from being the position taken by Mr. DOUGLAS's philosopher—perhaps suggested the taking of it by him. For "The Advancement of Learning" doesn't go altogether unread, even in these latter days.

Such Failure Counts as Success.

One cannot help being even more surprised than pleased, though the pleasure is great, that there should have come from Berlin a dispatch declaring that in the thirty-nine air raids made by the Allies over German territory only five persons were killed and nine wounded.

As this statement is followed by another to the effect that the "material damage" done by the raiders was insignificant, the obvious desire of those who wrote and sent out the dispatch was to show how inefficiently the Allies carry on aerial warfare. Doubtless, or at least probably, both statements minimize the truth, but at least they give conclusive evidence from the best of witnesses that the aviators of the Allies drop their bombs with great care and seek to accomplish legitimate military results, not to scatter indiscriminate slaughter among civilian populations.

If they tried to do so, of course they could kill as many nursemaids, postmen, notaries public, and patients and nurses in hospitals as have the German fliers. They can well afford to have no such achievements on their records, even though they were excusable as reprisals in kind.

The American Bolsheviki.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Bolsheviki resolution to run American labor is not confined to the Russian revolutionary emissaries, but is meeting encouragement in this country from the I. W. W.'s and radical elements in all parties—Socialist, Suffragist, and Feminist. This will be seen clearly in the approaching national conference of labor, Socialist, and radical movements to be held in this city Feb. 16 and 17, announcements of which were distributed at a recent dinner which I attended, given under the anomalous auspices of the Women's Peace Party at a Broadway hotel. Several hundred were present, a mingling of college radicals, suffragists, feminists, mild old ladies and gentlemen, and foreign-looking men who spoke with a Russian or German accent. Their after-dinner speeches, anti-Ally and anti-war, developed an entirely new trend, and I heard with amazement that the future salvation of the world lay in Bolshevism. Every mention of the name brought forth wild applause, in contradistinction to the derisive laughter which greeted any allusion to religion or government.

These people are, most of them, sincere dupes, radicals of all types, theorists united with anarchists, and pro-German propagandists under the common banner of discontent. They are prototypes of the literati and philosophers who, just before the French Revolution, met in the salons of Paris to acclaim the approaching millennium.

How long will the easy-going American people remain blinded to the treachery of those to whom they extend hospitality and protection to the molelike forces which, under the disguise of other movements, seek the disintegration of our Government, the fomenting of a class war, and I. W. W. or Bolsheviki control? If you think this statement exaggerated, read their literature, attend their meetings, and judge for yourself.

MRS. ALYN WILLIAMS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Professor W. E. Hocking in his letter in THE TIMES of Feb. 10 says that President Wilson and Mr. Lloyd George have not committed their Governments regarding Alsace-Lorraine. If this is the case I should like to know what it means when President Wilson in his message to Congress of Jan. 8 states that:

> All French territory should be freed and the invaded portions restored, and the wrong done to France by Prussia in 1871 in the matter of Alsace-Lorraine, which has unsettled the peace of the world for nearly fifty years, should be righted in order that peace may once more be made secure in the interest of all.

and when he made this statement in his telegram addressed to me on Jan. 11, as follows:

> May I not thank you very warmly for your generous message of Jan. 9 and express the hope that the New Year may realize for Alsace-Lorraine the hopes deferred?

As for Mr. Lloyd George, this is what he declared in his address of Jan. 5, 1918:

> We mean to stand by the French democracy to the death in the demand she makes for a reconsideration of the great wrong of 1871, when, without any regard to the wishes of the population, two French provinces were torn from the side of France and incorporated in the German Empire. This sore has poisoned the peace of Europe for half a century, and, until it is cured, healthful conditions will not have been restored. There can be no better illustration of the folly and wickedness of using a transient military success to violate national right.

Professor Hocking says that to the French Government and to most of the French people, there is no Alsace-Lorraine question. This is true, but he omits to state that this question is also nonexistent as far as the people of Alsace-Lorraine itself are concerned.

Professor Hocking is wrong when he says that the resolve, on the part of France, to regain possession of Alsace-Lorraine has been created by the war. This resolve has never ceased to exist since 1871. But, while France felt herself mutilated without these provinces, while her heart never ceased to bleed at the thought of the children that had been torn from her, she was too high-minded, too high-souled to consider for a single instant the precipitation of the world into such a horrible war; to see whole countries destroyed and millions of lives sacrificed in order to regain what by right and by sentiment belonged to her. Alsace-Lorraine, on the other hand, during all the years of German domination, never ceased to consider itself a part of France as the protests which, for all time, will remain among the most exalted documents of history well show.

But let us see what would happen if Alsace-Lorraine were declared autonomous. These provinces are surrounded by four countries, France, Luxembourg, Germany, and Switzerland. They would be an inland country without access to the sea and therefore dependent upon their neighbors for their exports and imports. Germany for its industries is largely dependent on the coal and iron of Alsace-Lorraine. On the other hand, Alsace-Lorraine for its industries, and for a number of commodities, is dependent on France or Germany. The whole world is now acquainted with German ways, as we have seen her at work in peace times in France, in England, in Italy, in Russia, in the United States, in South America, etc., where she succeeded by means which are far from honorable in obtaining a practical monopoly of many branches of industry and commerce.

With this record in view how long would it be until economically Alsace-Lorraine, after having obtained autonomy, would be again under the heel of Germany? This would mean that she could obtain from Alsace-Lorraine all the iron necessary for her industries, which in turn would mean that she could prepare for another war. This time, however, Germany would be careful not to start the war before she would be so overwhelmingly superior in armaments and preparedness as to be assured of a quick and complete victory which would mean for her the mastery of the world and for the world the doom of democracy.

I wish to impress upon all Americans who have the welfare of their country at heart the importance of this question of Alsace-Lorraine to the whole world. It is their duty, toward themselves as well as toward their country, that they should be thoroughly acquainted with this question and to that effect I recommend to every one to read the best book on this subject ever written, "Alsace-Lorraine Under German Rule," by Charles Downer Hazen, professor at Columbia University.

CLEMENT RUEFF,

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In reply to "A Friend of the A's and B's," whose letter appeared in The Times of Feb. 12, I should like to say that in my opinion the local board of the district is primarily responsible for the unfairness existing in the case cited. For the last three months I have been taking an active interest in the work of my local board and I have attended a great many of the hearings on just such cases as that mentioned. The Government Appeal Agent and at least two members of the board are present at these hearings. Each case is gone into very fully and judged on its individual merits. When necessary, detailed and careful affidavits are drawn up by some member of the Legal Advisory Board associated with the local board. Registrants are given ample opportunity to furnish additional proof in support of their claims and the right and value of an appeal to the district board are carefully explained when the case merits an appeal.

Speaking from the standpoint of an unbiased witness, I can say that the decision in every case I have heard has been fair and square. I am quite sure that had Mr. A.—judging the case as "A Friend of the A's and B's" presents it—been examined by the local board of my district, he would have been put in Class 1, and Mr. B in Class 2, or even in Class 4 if the circumstances warranted it.

ARCADY: A VALENTINE.

Said your heart to my heart,
One soft sweet blowing Spring,
"Come, follow me to Arcady,
For love is blossoming!
I'll give you wealth of golden sun,
A new world green and wide,
I'll wreathe your hair with roses there,
And you shall be my bride!"

Said my heart to your heart,
One snapping Winter night,
"Your chair is here, draw up, my dear,
The hearth is blazing bright.
I'll toast the slippers for your feet,
And warm your hands in mine;
For home shall be our Arcady,
And you my Valentine!"

NO COMPROMISE FOR AMERICA.

The Way to Peace is First Through Victory in the Field, Followed by Revolution in Germany.

By FRANK BOHN.

There is but one way for peace to come quickly, and that is by revolution in Germany. There is but one way to secure revolution in Germany, and that is by our hurriedly organizing every man and woman, every dollar and day's work, for the field of battle. Every word now spoken for peace weakens the force of the revolutionary element in Germany. Every word spoken and deed done for uncompromising war hastens the day of the German revolution.

Those who think that this struggle can be compromised do not realize its character. It is not primarily the old autocracy that we fight. It is the new autocracy. If we were merely engaged in stamping out the tyranny of Frederick the Great in Germany, we could very well say, "Let the Germans be political serfs if they wish to." What we are fighting is the terrible despotism of an industrial autocracy, which, if it is victorious in this war, will spread around the world and give us the new industrial organization in terms of German Kultur. There is nothing inherent in the present German system, in German Kultur, which makes the development of a democracy in a victorious Germany either necessary or probable. If Germany is defeated, then her social system has failed as a world system. If Germany is victorious, then her social system will have won as a world system. Considered industrially, two such systems of society as those represented by Germany and America can know no compromise.

Only by repetition can we make ourselves understood. Give us peace before Germany is beaten back and defeated and she will hold what she has. Any one who doesn't know this doesn't know anything about Germany. The Bolsheviki chatter "No annexations, no indemnities" is heard on one side only. We listen in vain for an echo from amid the clanking Teutonic sabres. Will the advocates of a compromise peace kindly mention the name of a single Junker who has intimated in the slightest degree that Germany will give up Poland and Serbia, Riga or Constantinople? Belgium and the occupied portion of France they will probably be willing to trade back for their lost colonies in Africa and the Pacific—that is, if they are permitted to hold the Belgian railroads, seaports, coal and metal mines and banking capital.

Greater Germany now contains 187,000,000 of people. These, within twenty years, will become 250,000,000. When the present Crown Prince signs the next order for mobilization, about 1937, he will throw 25,000,000 of men upon such remnants of Europe, east and west, as our compromisers would leave outside of Germany. Compromise this war and every man and woman in America who lives twenty years will come to despise themselves for their ignorance and cowardice.

Let us not neglect to admit our errors. In England, France, and America we tried to cling to the democracy of our fathers by refusing to organize industrially. We used the State to fight the trusts so as to keep business weak. Then we fought the State to keep it weak. We shoved our heads in the sand while Germany, possessing in her Junkers a highly effective organizing force, went ahead with the militant organization and the machine process. What organization can do against disorganization every annual report of international business immediately before the war goes to show. Also every battlefront of Europe up to the present moment. We must organize. But let us organize as free men and women, not as slaves.

I would rather see our American people swept from the earth than become Germanized. Better that every ablebodied man among us be mangled to shreds on the field of battle than surrender to Kultur.

We fight against a tyranny which governs men and women politically and denies them every right which 300 years of social evolution in England and America have made precious and sacred. We fight against an autocracy which governs industrially, whose necessary result is an industrial regimentation producing the most abject economic slavery conceivable. We fight against an autocracy which is today abolishing the freely organized family, and this without even the slightest effort to recognize or establish freedom in any other form. Germany today demands cannon fodder and buzzard bait from the shriveled souls and miserable bodies of her enslaved women and girls. So she breeds her offspring from women violated by force, from groups of women who are taught by the State and Church to patriotically share the same "husband" for the sake of producing babies for which neither parents, nor State, nor Church can possibly provide food or clothing. Monstrous and horrible as it is, this German system, if successful and dedicated for a generation more to world domination, will go on creating new and more horrible forms of economic slavery and sexual savagery. Let Kultur live in Germany and it will develop perforce on every square mile of the earth's surface. The world cannot live half militaristic and half pacifistic. "It will be all one thing or all the other." We do not have to believe that the whole world will sink down into Kultur. We must have, during this terrible time, strong faith that Kultur will be destroyed and that the world will thus "cease to be divided."

The basis of a durable peace does not concern any or all of the territorial questions at issue. This is not a territorial war. This is a social war. We are fighting a social system. Until that system is destroyed we cannot make peace. Free Germany and Austria from Junkerdom and Alsace-Lorraine and Bohemia will speedily find a way to freedom. The essential fact concerns democracy for the people of Berlin and Vienna as much as for Alsace-Lorraine and Bohemia.

Junkerdom looked about itself in the Summer of 1914 and saw one single army, half its own size, which was competent to fight effectively. That was the army of France. It saw the great, childish, plastic continents of Asia, Africa, and South America, like green pastures with peaceful herds, ready for spoliation. Possessed of a wonder weapon in its perfected industro-military régime, Junkerdom looked upon the whole world as its field of operations—a world in which the democracy of Milton and Lafayette and Jefferson, like that of Marx and Engels and Lassalle, would soon be as dead and as forgotten as the democracy of the age of Pericles. So Germany struck with careful forethought and stupendous power against us all. Let the visionary and misguided pacifists stop their chatter of peace to America.

ART NOTES.

Report on Art Scholarships—The New Exhibitions.

The Scholarship Committee of the School Art League has sent out its first report after seven years of quiet activity. During that time sixty-one industrial art scholarships have been given out. Several of the high schools are now co-operating with the league in defraying the expenses of scholarships, the league pledging itself to duplicate the amounts given to this end by each high school, and the New York School of Fine and Applied Art and the New York School of Design for Women have from the beginning materially reduced their fees for scholarship students. During the last year Pratt Institute has done the same.

Many instances are given in the report of scholarship students who have made profitable use of their opportunity and are now earning excellent salaries as creative art workers. Had they gone directly from the high schools into the industrial art world they could have hoped, in the majority of cases, for little more than positions in which mechanical work only is required. Mrs. Laurent Oppenheim, Chairman of the league, says in her report: "Manufacturers have heretofore been accustomed to buy designs abroad each year. We believe we have sufficient talent in America to supply the needs of our manufacturers, but this talent must be encouraged and directed. The confidence and co-operation of several large manufacturers have been gained. We now need the interest of the public."

The public should be interested in any organized effort to improve the character of industrial design in this country. It is a difficult undertaking at best, and needs to be pushed with the utmost force if the demands of the country after the war are to be met with credit to the American designer and to the public supporting and encouraging native designers. The need will have to be met not only by the young designers who have taken their chance in schools of industrial art, but also by the experienced artists who turn to industrial design as a patriotic, and incidentally a profitable, means of utilizing their highly developed talents. It is interesting to recall, as matter of inspiration and example, that the best Batik work of modern times has been done by the Dutchman Thorn-Prikker, whose remarkable stained glass has made a deep impression upon European art lovers. Prikker brought to the revival of Javanese Batik the knowledge of color he had gained through his profound study of color harmony, and to this knowledge he added a thorough study of Indian dyes and the vegetable compounds used in making these. Thus the simple Batik process was made to yield patterns of extraordinary beauty and expressiveness.

More Small Pictures.

The exhibition of small pictures now on view at the Macbeth Galleries is decidedly above the average of such exhibitions. There are pictures that affirm at once their suitability to hang on the walls of pleasant rooms without giving such rooms the aspect of the old-fashioned bohemian studio with sketches "stuck around," irrespective of appropriateness. There is Gari Melchers with his "Morning," for example; a happy little composition of a sturdy young woman in a lilac dressing sacque and a large-patterned skirt standing before a dressing table, with flowers and a gay little porcelain figure among its embellishments; the room hung with a flowered paper, and chintz curtains; everything full colored and cheerful—a picture to echo the cheerfulness of a Summer morning room done up "in country style."

A stronger note is struck in Winslow Homer's "On the Beach," a water color so positive in design and so vigorous in treatment as to suggest force and dignity wherever it might find a place. Childe Hassam's "Union Square," (when horse cars ran and four-wheelers stood by the curb,) is a window through which to see a snowy world from the safe vantage of a firelit room, provided there are to be any more firelit rooms. George Inness and Homer Martin, Chauncy Ryder and Gardner Symons, Dwight W. Tryon and J. H. Twachtman are others who paint small pictures that have this window quality. Arthur Davies adds the decorative arrangement that makes his canvases seem like mural paintings, in close alliance with architecture.

In the "Art Notes" published by this gallery the argument that the Winter exhibition of the Academy of Design seldom adequately represents the Academicians on account of the difficulty of painting two pictures for the academy's two exhibitions, is met by the suggestion that the academy dedicate its Winter exhibition to the work of outsiders, reserving the Spring exhibition exclusively for its own members. "This public-spirited action," the writer says, "would open a field to the many who now feel that they have no proper chance to exhibit. The academy, in a Spring exhibition closed to all outside its own membership, could demonstrate what it can do toward upholding American art standards." The suggestion is constructive and deserves consideration.

A Sale of Art Objects.

At the Silo Galleries the Karl Freund collection of art objects will be sold today and tomorrow. The collection includes many things not ordinarily found in exhibitions of antique furnishings. There is, for example, an early nineteenth century English hand organ that has base, flute, octave, piccolo, triangle, and drum, each controlled with a stop. There are Adam ceilings and Adam doors, a Chinese screen with niches in which stand Blanc-de-Chine figures, William and Mary bird-cages, and charming fans of all periods and countries. It is distinctly a collection for the householder who likes to do his own burrowing for treasure.

Exhibition by Father and Daughter.

Wells M. Sawyer and his daughter, Helen Alton Sawyer, are showing their work at the Babcock Galleries. Both paint landscape and there is more than a family likeness between their ways of regarding a subject and of putting paint on canvas. Miss Sawyer has the more direct method and uses a fresher palette. She gives the impression of caring first for her picture and giving nature the second place, while her father reverses this order of preference. The particular charm of the exhibition is, however, the obvious pleasure taken by both artists in their painting. Miss Sawyer's water-color drawings of costumes with smart little girls inside of them savor of school work. Her landscapes are much more personal and worth while.

MAXWELL RESIGNS, SUCCESSOR IN DOUBT

STRAUBENMILLER IN CHARGE

President Somers of Board Denies That Politics Will Play a Part in Final Selection.

Dr. William H. Maxwell, in a letter to the Board of Education yesterday, resigned as City Superintendent of Schools and accepted the position of City Superintendent Emeritus at an annual salary of $10,000 for the duration of his life. In resigning he said he wished to express his high appreciation of the kindness and generosity which he had experienced at the hands of all Boards of Education during his official career.

Dr. Gustave Straubenmuller was unanimously chosen Acting City Superintendent until a successor to Dr. Maxwell was elected. He has been Acting City Superintendent virtually since the serious illness of Dr. Maxwell began. President Somers denied emphatically that there was anything in the report that politics had entered into the question of appointing the City Superintendent. He said it was not true that either Mr. McCooey of Brooklyn or Mr. Murphy of New York was backing certain persons for the office. The board, he said, at present had no one in mind for the place.

President Somers and Vice President Frank D. Wilsey of the Board of Education will attend the meeting of the Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association, which convenes at Atlantic City on Feb. 25. Superintendents from all parts of the country will be in attendance. A successor to Dr. Maxwell may be found among them. There are three candidates in the New York Department of Education: Dr. Straubenmuller, Associate Superintendent Edward B. Shallow, who lives in Brooklyn and who has been an opponent of the Gary system in the public schools of this city, and Associate Superintendent William L. Ettinger, who is the father of pre-vocational work. So far as could be learned the members of the Board of Education have not expressed themselves at present in favor of any of these candidates.

Mr. Wilsey introduced a resolution yesterday that the by-laws of the Board of Education, relative to the appointment of married women, be suspended for the period of the war, with regard to the wives of men who were in service. The by-laws state that no married woman shall be appointed to a teaching or supervising position in the department unless her husband is physically or mentally unfit for work or has left her. President Somers said some wives of men who were at the front had asked him for temporary employment in the department. At his suggestion the matter was referred to the Board of Examiners for an opinion on the subject.

Mr. Somers announced that the sale of war savings stamps, which had amounted in the public schools on Dec. 14 to about $12,500, had increased on Feb. 8 to $303,695.76.

More than $7,000,000 will be used by Auditor Cook of the Department of Education to pay the salaries of employes. This is by arrangement with the Controller. Mr. Cook went to Albany on Monday and got from the State Commissioner of Education a statement in favor of the independence of the Board. He said that this would offset any stand by the Controller. Mr. Somers said that the Controller was inclined to agree with the Board. He thought, however, that the Board should be willing to have the co-operation of other departments in the expenditures of moneys. A great many employes of the Department of Education have suffered much inconvenience by the difference of opinion on this subject by the Board and the Controller, their pay being held up.

Mr. Somers called attention to the great falling off of candidates for appointment as teachers. Two hundred and ninety-five applications to training schools had been received this month as against 457 in February, 1917, and 401 in June, 1917. At his suggestion the Board of Examiners and the principals of the training schools were asked to report to the Board within twenty days as to the best methods of maintaining a sufficient number of satisfactory teachers in the schools.

CAPT. OFFLEY CHOSEN FOR WASHINGTON POST

Captain William M. Offley, who for some years past has been Divisional Superintendent of the New York office of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice, has been appointed a special assistant to the Attorney General in place of Wrisley Brown, who recently became a Major in the army. Captain Offley's new duties, the exact nature of which it was impossible to get last night, will require his removal to Washington, where he will presumably act as one of the principal officials of the Bureau of Investigation under its chief, A. Bruce Bielaski. His place here will be taken by Charles F. De Woody, who has been Divisional Superintendent of another district.

Captain Offley's bureau, which before the war did general investigation work for the office of the Attorney General and the United States District Attorney, first came into prominence in combating the work of German agents in this country in January, 1915, in connection with the plot to get German reservists back to their fatherland on forged, stolen or purchased passports of the United States and other neutral countries.

The leading spirit of this movement, Hans Adam von Wedel, escaped, but several of his subordinates were arrested and are now serving penitentiary terms. Since then Captain Offley and his subordinates, whose number has been greatly enlarged since the United States entered the war, have taken a prominent part in the tracking down of German spies and subsidized propaganda in this country. He directed the big roundup last September, conducted by the Department of Justice and the police, in which nearly 300 enemy aliens whose remaining at large was judged to be dangerous to the public welfare were taken into custody and interned for the duration of the war.

José C. Moniz, 68 years old, who up to last Monday was a clerk in the Portuguese Consulate at 8 Bridge Street, was arrested yesterday morning by detectives of the Sixth Branch in his furnished room at 157 Henry Street, Brooklyn, charged with assault on Joseph Jaffee, a messenger boy. The detectives searched his room after the arrest, and found a number of papers belonging to the Consulate. When Moniz was arraigned before Magistrate Walsh the detectives said they thought the documents ought to be inspected by the Federal Government. Moniz was held in $1,500 bail for examination today. The papers found in his room were examined by agents of the Department of Justice.

George de Silveira de Carte, the Portuguese Consul, said that the papers were unimportant, and that Moniz had been discharged for prying into code information relating to commercial matters and selling it to shippers.

The Vacation War Relief Committee will move into new quarters at 26 West Twenty-third Street next week, where the work rooms and distributing departments of the work will be continued. THRIFT CARDS TO BE WAR VALENTINES

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Shepard Will Show Children a Way of Bringing Peace a Step Nearer.

TO START SAVINGS CLUBS

Insurance Officials to Form War Aid Organizations in Their Offices—Solicitors to Serve as Agents.

A new type of valentine comes into existence today in the shape of a Thrift Card. The War Savings Committee for the New York District announced yesterday that this was a Valentine Day when the "patron saint of lovers, usually bedecked in gay ribbons and bearing on his visiting card sweet phrases of endearment and good-will, is going about in more sober raiment." Instead of "roses are red, violets are blue," his remembrances read like this: "Thrift begins with little savings."

In other words the favorite valentine of a large part of the population of the United States this season, according to the War Savings Committee, should have a twenty-five-cent stamp attached, showing that a quarter has actually been loaned to the Government to help "bring about that state of peace of which St. Valentine so fondly dreams."

Mr. and Mrs. Finley J. Shepard were among the first to announce to the War Savings Committee that they intended to send thrift cards as valentines to all their child friends. Mr. and Mrs. Shepard have adopted no less than four children whose parents were unequal to the burden of supporting them.

"There can be no more appropriate way of celebrating the day," said Mr. Shepard yesterday, "than by introducing children and grown-ups too, to this way of helping bring peace a step nearer. Every quarter loaned to the Government means more supplies for the men abroad and every Thrift Card filled will help to bring another soldier back from the war alive. There is a fascination particularly to children in seeing the cards fill up with quarters they save and the habit so begun will mean much more to them than they realize when the time comes for them to understand more fully the true meaning of the feast of St. Valentine."

A meeting of insurance representatives was held at the Bankers Club yesterday to discuss the formation of war savings societies in the insurance company offices. William G. Willcox, borough chairman of the War Savings Committe presided, and Elihu Root and Arthur H. Ham spoke. The insurance men agreed to have their solicitors act as agents for war savings and thrift stamps and steps will be taken to organize war savings societies in all of the companies.

DANIEL H. TOLMAN, 'LOAN SHARK,' DIES

FAILED TO MOVE GOV. GLYNN

Operated Loan Offices Throughout the Country in Charge of Women.

Daniel H. Tolman, known throughout the United States as a usurer, died yesterday at his home in Montclair, N. J., of intestinal trouble. He was 68 years old, and had retired from his business of lending money at exorbitant rates to salaried men and wage earners after having been prosecuted a number of times and having been fined in New Jersey and sent to Blackwell's Island in New York.

Tolman operated in some sixty-three American and Canadian cities, and, though hundreds of thousands of poor men passed through his clutches during the many years he did business, but few of them ever came directly into contact with him for the reason that he originated and perfected the well-known plan of conducting his occupation shielded behind the skirts of women. Irate and outraged borrowers, discovering that their payments somehow never ate very far into the principal of their loans, would visit one of the Tolman offices belligerently bent upon wreaking personal vengeance upon the loan shark. Instead of being able to confront him, they would find themselves helpless before some deft-voiced woman agent, who would explain that she was but an employe, and had no power to loosen the clutches the borrower found ever tightening about him.

Just after he was fined $1,000 in a New Jersey court and put on probation with a warning that if ever again he loaned money at an illegal rate he would be sent to jail, Tolman, in October, 1913, was convicted in Special Sessions in New York of usury, and sentenced to six months in the penitentiary. At that time he asserted he had retired from business and was about to make a trip about the world. In sentencing him, Justice Zeller excoriated the prisoner in blistering fashion.

"You are one of the most contemptible usurers in your unspeakable business," the court told him. "The poor people must be protected from such sharks as you, and we trust that your conviction and sentence will be a notice to you and all your kind that the courts have found a way to put a stop to usury. Men of your type are a curse to the community, and the money they gain is blood money."

Tolman's lawyers, family, and friends, led by his son, Elmer E. Tolman, made strenuous but vain efforts to get Tolman out of prison. They petitioned Governor Glynn to pardon him, and the son offered, if this were done, to burn some 25,000 notes held by the "Loan Shark King," aggregating about $500,000, if the Governor would release his father. At a hearing in the matter the Tolman partisans went to Albany prepared to make a bonfire of the $500,000 worth of paper. Governor Glynn took the matter under advisement, but Tolman, then in Hart's Island Prison, declared he would rather serve out his sentence than "thus forego my manhood," and the project came to nought. The sentence was served out.

To the last Tolman defended his operations, insisting his business was legitimate, and that he "only did what every banker does." He moved to Montclair from Brooklyn five years ago.

TWO MORE AVIATORS KILLED AT FORT WORTH

Lieut. Wray and Cadet Porter Plunge to Death—Gen. March's Son Dies of Injuries.

FORT WORTH, Texas, Feb. 13.—Three more fatalities, due to two separate crashes, were added today to the lengthening roll of deaths at Hicks Flying Field, fifteen miles from Forth Worth. The dead are Lieutenant Peyton C. March, son of the newly appointed Acting Chief of Staff of the United States Army; First Lieutenant J. L. Wray, a native Canadian, but who had resided for years at Los Angeles, and Cadet Flyer R. Porter, whose father is R. A. Porter, a jeweler of Patchogue, L. I.

Lieutenant Wray, who was 32 years old, and Cadet Porter, 28, fell today four miles from Hicks' Field. A party of cadets saw them plunge earthward and hurried to the scene, arriving a few moments after the machine almost buried itself in the sod. The bodies of the two men were pinned beneath the wreckage. How control was lost never will be fully known, but in today's accident, as well as Lieutenant March's accident yesterday, each plane was seen to plunge into a nose dive, one of the most dangerous plights in which a flyer can be placed.

The mother and sister of Lieutenant March are on their way to Fort Worth tonight to take charge of the body.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Army officers attribute the growing frequency of fatal accidents at the military aviation schools to the fact that large numbers of the thousands of students are just reaching the stage of qualifying as fighting fliers. This is dangerous business, in which the student-officer must go through with all the perilous manoeuvres he might have to execute in fighting, pursuing, or retrating from an enemy.

Secretary Baker said today that the numerous accidents during the past week, one of which cost the life of Lieutenant Peyton C. March, Jr., had been drawn to his attention. He explained that the Signal Corps required a searching investigation of every accident, the purpose being to correct any fault of machine or method which might add to the hazard of flying.

There are many thousands of students at more than a score of training stations, and the percentage of serious accidents so far has been regarded as gratifyingly small.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Feb. 13.—Mrs. Francis A. Martin and Carl Turner of Plainfield have been advised by the War Department of the death of their youngest brother, Lieutenant Frank Browne Turner, 22 years old, in an airplane accident in France on January 30.

He was sent abroad in October in charge of 100 cadet aviators after completing a three months' course at the ground aviation school at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and at Mineola. In June last he was graduated from Yale.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Turner, live at Wicomico, Md. The Lieutenant was a nephew of Lieut. Col. Frank Browne Keech, acting Inspector General at Newport News, Va., and head of the Stock Exchange firm of Keech, Lowe & Co.

Charles Barron, Actor, Dies.

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 13.—Charles Barron, known to the last generation of theatregoers as the leading man of old Boston Museum stock company and for many years one of America's most distinguished actors, died yesterday at his home, 98 Winthrop Street, Roxbury, at the age of 79. Charles Barron's real name was Charles Harrison Brown. He was born in the West End Jan. 2, 1840, of a family of strict religious principles. Much against their wishes, while he was still a clerk, he appeared on the stage in August, 1860, at Portland, Me., taking the part of Jerry Clip in "The Widow's Victim." After a short season in Springfield he became leading man at Grover's Theatre in Washington, D. C. He was later at the Chestnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia; at Wallack's, New York, and at the Boston Theatre and the Globe Theatre in Boston. He was Julia Marlowe's first leading man when she started her starring career.

GALLI-CURCI, ROSINA; RAISA AS ISABEAU

THE BARBER OF SEVILLE, lyric comedy in two acts, book in Italian, by Sterbini, from a French play of Beaumarchais; music by Gioacchino Rossini. At the Lexington Theatre.

Rosina	Amelita Galli-Curci
Il Conte d'Almaviva	Juan Nadal
Dr. Bartolo	Vittorio Trevisan
Figaro	Giacomo Rimini
Basilio	Vittorio Arimondi
Fiorello	Giordano Paltrinieri
Berta	Louise Berat
Sergente	Desire Defrere
Conductor	Giuseppe Sturani

Two works as wide apart as the alpha and omega of Italy's heritage of opera and drama, Rossini's "Il Barbiere di Siviglia," which was the first Italian opera ever sung in New York, in 1825, and Mascagni's "Isabeau," last of Campanini's novelties in a twentieth century invasion, were performed on the stage of the Lexington Theatre yesterday, a "double opera day" with a vengeance. Rossini's actually more than century-old "Barber" was sung at Mme. Galli-Curci's postponed matinée, to the same ticket holders whom the prima donna had disappointed when she could not appear in "Romeo and Juliet" last Monday.

Such a performance as Galli-Curci gave of Rosina, the favorite rôle of all prima donnas since Garcia-Malibran, must come first in any account of such a day's musical doings in New York. She gave the finest exhibition of beautiful singing she has shown here, and old-time operagoers at the start were keen to hear if she would interpolate in Rossini's free-for-all "lesson scene" either the Proch variations, the Strauss "Primavera," Arditi's "Parla," dear to other heroines, or even Patti's own "Home, Sweet Home," or Sembrich's dainty Chopin mazurka, "The Maiden's Wish."

Rossini's classic is emphatically an opera of memories, but there were moments when they were forgotten by yesterday's enthralled crowd. Galli-Curci sang Rossini's own air, "Una Voce Poco Fa," in the first act, as the opera gives it, and in the second, in rapid succession, the bell song from "Lakmé," then the bird song from "Pearl of Brazil," and finally in English, "Home, Sweet Home," in that strange, spiritual, floating voice of one's boyhood dreams, that brought tears to hundreds of eyes and a clutch at countless throats. She enlisted the heart, she was never mechanical; it was the spontaneous outpouring of the bird that sings at nature's prompting, at dawn on crisp, tropical mornings, or at twilight in cool, northern latitudes. Her archly winning comedy, her exquisite phrasing, her ascending chromatics, as rippling and full-throated as her trill, charmed and intoxicated an audience that went expecting much and was not disappointed. The cast ranged from tenor Nadal, who knew no better than to sit with folded arms at a dummy piano during the singing lesson, up to two admirable comedians, Arimondi and Trevisan, to Paltrinieri, Berat, Defrere, in small parts, and Sturani at the bâton.

Galli-Curci "dressed" Rosina as naturally as she acted her. In the first act's opening street view of Seville she was heard and not seen, a voice within Dr. Bartolo's house, a snatch of melody in two lines, where the old French play instead brings the heroine out on a balcony, from which she drops a note to Count Almaviva. For that visible flirtation the opera substitutes a ventriloqual appeal to its larger audience. Later, in the house, the prima appeared in a Spanish comb, lace kerchief, elbow sleeves, flowered petticoat, and waving a mother-of-pearl fan, like a well-born woman in her home. She blazed in act two into tropic Summer attire, a slim, frilled muslin skirt, white socks, and gleaming ruby velvet waist and slippers. Her triumph yesterday, as a quantitative display of singing, was equal to her first "Dinorah" here and her first Hippodrome concert combined. It was not surprising to hear that Rosina is this latest prima donna's favorite rôle, an opinion in which the matinée verdict yesterday agreed.

MASCAGNI OPERA PRODUCED.

Mascagni's much delayed novelty, "Isabeau," a thing of yesterday, indeed an opera up to the minute as compared with that which preceded it by a few hours, was heard by a first-night audience of great size at the Lexington last evening, just a month and a day after his "Lodoletta" had been sung at the Metropolitan, a coincidence of two new works this season by the composer of "Cavalleria Rusticana," who for nearly a generation has been known as a "one-opera man."

The Chicago Opera Association had apparently seized on the work which the New Theatre rejected in 1910—rejected for reasons which kept the cables warm under the Atlantic for months after, and for which the Italian courts gave Mascagni good American dollars by way of heart balm—and so "Isabeau" had its first hearing in the United States at the Chicago Auditorium last Nov. 12, six or seven years after Mascagni himself brought out the work at Buenos Ayres. Yesterday's introduction here was identical with the Western performance, except that Giulio Crimi, who was the forest lover out there, had been left in hospital, and a young American tenor, Forrest Lamont, sang the hero last night. Campanini, too, had conducted at the opening of his company's home season, but after a long illness he yielded the baton to Sturani in New York. The opera was handsomely mounted, and the orchestra was applauded after an elaborate prelude, as well as in its accompaniment to a first-act "Song of the Hawk," in the second-act "Intermezzo," and the third and final act's duet of the lovers, Folco and Isabeau.

Rosa Raisa, the Russian soprano of buoyant youth and voluminous voice, carried the onerous task, containing sensational possibilities, be it said, of portraying on the stage an Italian counterpart of Lady Godiva, who in the eleventh century or thereabouts rode through Coventry, a respectable community of England, clad only in her hair. It could again be observed here, as it was in Chicago, that Miss Raisa had evidently thought about the matter with the earnestness of a conscientious artist, who had nothing to conceal, who could, indeed, not find any way to make the story real save by doing the thing that was plainly before her to do. As the book was quoted, "She halts an instant yet, as in hesitation; then, gaining the mastery, throws off the cloak with a swift motion of her arms, letting it fall into the hands of her attendants, and disappears down the broad stairway." This the young opera star repeated to the letter, and the three steps required before she could gain shelter of Peter Donigan's protecting scenery sent a ripple through this sophisticated New York audience, as the same incident had in Chicago, even though the singer was clothed from head to foot in diaphanous silk fleshings. The vision lasted, with no mishap, for about two-fifths of a second. The curtains did not close on further observation of the ride, which the spectators pictured to themselves with the help of Mascagni's inevitable "Intermezzo," while Raisa, on her white horse, galloped twice across the scene.

Lady Godiva's Ride.

Forrest Lamont, as the hero, Folco, by the opera's story, was supposed to gaze with a lover's transfixed glance upon the departing Princess, to sing to her and pelt her with flowers, in defiance of the citizens of Coventry, who had vowed that, if any man dared view the ordeal of Godiva—or Isabeau—they would put his eyes out. This tragic dénouement, interrupted by the heart-touched heroine's return from her ride, once more clothed in garments of modesty, formed the closing scene of Mascagni's three tableaux, the only opera ever written, it is said, with but a single love duet. The final curtain fell on a picture of violence without the palace walls, the lover blinded, the heroine in a faint. Miss Raisa, needless to add, sang her music with inexhaustible power, with ever fresh beauty of tone. Mr. Lamont, heard in Hadley's "Azora," again showed his quality in a high, ringing tenor voice. Mr. Rimini, as the King, who bade his daughter lay aside maidenly pride after rejecting her suitors all the way from Dublin to Edinburgh town, played a trying part with dignity. Miss Lazzari as an old woman of the forest, Mmes. Sharlow and Swartz as court ladies, did their bit, as in other small rôles did Maguenat, Nicolay, Defrere, and a rare motley of mediaeval characters.

Pietro Mascagni, a man of a dozen operas, not of one, has in "Isabeau" produced a successor not so much to "Cavalleria" as to "Iris," a work of finer texture, maturer feeling, much solid worth, however lacking in the wealth of melody, rude vitality, red-blood passion, and blatant musical style that made his first youthful prize winner sound like the shot heard round the world. "Isabeau" has made haste slowly to the local stage. Liebler & Co. were said to have spent $100,000 preparing the world-premiere for Bessie Abott, that never took place. Its music, played in private by the composer at Rome in December, 1910, was called by friendly critics a "masterpiece." In the early days of January following, Mascagni cabled that he was a wronged man, and he denied breach of contract on learning that an original New York hearing had been abandoned, the local purchasers blaming him for the fiasco. The Milan courts in March confirmed his suit and that of Sonzogno, his publisher, with cash damages, but refused the limit asked, saying that Mascagni should have been less exacting of the Lieblers, who had given so much proof of confidence in his great fame.

"RIGOLETTO" SUNG AGAIN.

Verdi's "Rigoletto" was performed for the third time this season at the Metropolitan Opera House last evening, with Maria Barrientos, the Spanish coloratura soprano, as Gilda, the rôle in which she had made her re-entry as a member of Mr. Gatti's company within the last fortnight, and her young countryman, Hipolito Lazaro, tenor, as the Duke, which he also had sung at his recent début. De Luca again had the title rôle, and Mme. Perini was the Maddalena of the quartet. There were Mardones as Sparafucile and in important minor parts Rossi, Bada, Laurenti, Reschiglian, Mmes. Mattfeld, Egener, and Borniggia. Mr. Moranzoni conducted.

The Metropolitan production, now as always in Mr. Gatti's ten seasons based on an organization unrivaled in the ensemble of its stage, in substantial splendor of the settings, most of all in the department of the orchestra, was perhaps a leading feature at the present time in an old opera too often elsewhere fallen into slipshod methods and careless usage in just these particulars that make for perfection.

Mme. Barrientos sang with distinguished skill, with personal charm, and with captivating effect in the high, soft finish of the "Caro Nome" air. Both she and Mr. De Luca made much of the later tragic scenes, while Mr. Lazaro showed a gain of confidence in his good voice after the extreme nervousness which had marred his début.

PAULIST CHORUS HEARD.

Chicago Choir Makes Profound Impression at Farewell.

The Paulist Choristers, 100 strong, under the direction of their founder, Father William Joseph Finn, gave a second and final concert yesterday afternoon in Carnegie Hall, where an audience of quality both musical and social, and including many of New York's leading choirmasters, was asked to listen to a lighter program than last Monday evening, yet was left by the singing of it profundly impressed. There were English carols, such as "I Saw Three Ships," sung by Master William Probst, and the "Ave Maris Stella" of Grieg.

The French veteran, Dubois's, "Today Thou Shalt Be With Me in Paradise," had more reverential atmosphere than is found in many "miracle plays." Tschaikowsky's "Child Jesus Once a Garden Made," which has been known as a Christmas song in programs of Miss Cheatham, was new in its proper choral setting; the eloquent pauses, the sudden dynamic contrasts, brought out by Father Finn's alert beat in commanding fashion, were perhaps the high point of the matinée.

In Russian Church music, as Gretchaninoff's "Cherubic Hymn," the choir approached a ritual more familiar to New York, which has its Russian Cathedral singers here, with their Moscow leader, thanks in part to gifts from Chicago. Master Hallisey, a 9-year-old star, sang again Father Finn's arrangement of the old popular song, "The Mocking Bird."

The choristers were to leave today, continuing a six months' tour in aid of the reclamation work in France.

KELLOGG ATTACKS CONTROL OF ROADS

McLEAN'S STAND SIMILAR

Two Senators Agree That Emergency Legislation Is Necessary to Protect the Property.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—While opposing the action of President Wilson in taking over the railroad systems of the country, Senator Kellogg of Minnesota, the "trust buster," in a speech in the Senate today, urged the passage of the amended McAdoo Railroad bill as a war emergency. Senator Kellogg said that the railroads should have been left to their own private management, but now that the Government had taken them over legislation was needed to guarantee ample compensation to the owners.

Senator McLean of Connecticut, also supporting the bill, attacked the principle of Government control, saying that it could be tolerated only as a war measure. He said the transportation facilities had broken down under Governmental supervision, and that this was indicative of what might be expected under any system of Federal control. But, like Senator Kellogg, he advocated passage of the McAdoo bill, with the amendments in it to allow the Interstate Commerce Commission power of review in the rate and compensation features.

Senator Kellogg said that in taking over of the railroads President Wilson had gone far beyond the intent of Congress when it passed the emergency law of Aug. 10, 1917, under which the President acted.

"But the railroads have been taken over under the war power conferred upon the President, and we are confronted with the necessity of making payment for the use of the property," argued the Senator. "It is our duty to make as effective as possible, under the circumstances, the operation under Government control. It might be argued that, as the railroads have already been taken over, the advisability of doing so is no longer an issue."

Defends the Railroads.

Senator Kellogg urged the amendment to return the railroads to private ownership eighteen months after the war.

The Minnesota Senator spoke of the argument that the railroads had broken down under private control and that, therefore, the Government had to step in.

"I am not here to claim that our transportation system is perfect, that it cannot be improved, or that the laws governing the railroads are all they sholud be," he said. "But when the public hopes, by the medium of Government operation, to cure all the evils resulting from transportation congestion we are likely to be disappointed. We have in this country, all in all, the best system of railroads in the world, the cheapest constructed, the lowest capitalization per mile, the cheapest freight rates, and the best service, considering the varied conditions of climate, industry and development, and the necessity for vast increase in transportation facilities to meet the growth of the country." He then produced figures to prove that the roads had met requirements under private management.

He argued that one of the chief causes of the congestion that overtook the railroads before the Government assumed control was the operation of the priority orders issued by Government departments as war emergency measures.

"It was a most glaring example of abuse of Governmental power, through separate branches of the service, in no way co-ordinated," the Senator said. "It was the understanding of Congress when it passed the law of Aug. 10, 1917, that there would be but one power directing the preferences and priority in transportation. As a matter of fact, instead of all the priorities going through Judge Lovett, the War Department, the Navy Department, the Food Administration, and Fuel Administration were all issuing priority orders, not only through the heads of departments, but commissary clerks and employes scattered all over the country were furnished with blue cards to place upon cars to denote a priority or preference shipment. But, beyond this, these employes gave the cards to manufacturers, and manufacturers making a Government preference of shipment not only used the cards for the Government, but for themselves."

As amended by the Senate committee, Senator Kellogg maintained, the McAdoo bill appeared to meet the requirements.

"It is not perfect, but under the circumstances it reflects the best judgment of the Administration and the committee," he said. "Its three controlling propositions are the compensation to be paid the railroads, the manner of fixing and regulating rates and the duration of Government operation."

Taking up the matter of compensation, Senator Kellogg said that the necessity for providing for it when the Government took any property was clearly defined by the Constitution.

Want Time Limit Fixed.

"The property taken over represents a value somewhere between fifteen and seventeen billions of dollars," he went on. "It represents securities, stocks and bonds in the hands of the public of substantially $16,500,000,000. The exact amount is difficult to determine by reason of what is known as intercorporate holdings. In making these figures the Interstate Commerce Commission has eliminated stock of one road held by another, and has only given the amount of securities in the hands of the public. As thus determined, the railroads represent a stock and bond issue of $16,710,000,000, as of June 30, 1916, and a book investment of $17,380,000,000, as of Dec. 31, 1917. The interest and dividends upon these securities come due at various periods during each year and must be paid in order to maintain the stability of this vast investment."

Discussing the proposal of the bill to allow the net average operating income for the years 1915 to 1917, inclusive, as basis for compensation, Senator Kellogg referred to 1915 as a year of depression for the roads, while 1916 and 1917 had been prosperous ones. He believed the three years would form a fair average upon which to work. The aggregate to be paid the railroads yearly, upon that basis, he said, would be approximately $941,500,000.

Senator Kellogg urged the logic of having the power of rate-fixing, which is delegated to the President under the bill, made subject to review by the Interstate Commerce Commission, as the committee's amendment provides. The matter of rates, he said, was one of the most vital to the railroads, and power to fix it ought not to be put entirely in the hands of the Executive.

Arguing for the amendment to end Government control eighteen months after the war is over, Senator Kellogg said:

"I am very strongly of the opinion that this bill should provide a definite time after the termination of the war when Government operation shall cease, and that it should not be left to the uncertain result of future Congressional action.

"I must admit that I have had to revise my ideas a good many times since the beginning of this war, and it it is our duty as Senators to meet these startling changes with the most liberal spirit. Though I did not believe it was wise or necessary to take over the railroads, I am prepared to go to the full limit to make Government operation as successful as possible, and to grant all the powers necessary to that end. But I am not yet prepared to take a step that will vest such powers in Government-ownership advocates and force Government operation of railroads upon the people of this country. That question should be met by the American people squarely and fairly, unhampered by any other issue, and should the time come when the people of this country deem it wise to take over the railroads their mandate is final. I may support it myself, but I am not yet ready to do so."

Senator McLean characterized the scheme of Government control under private management as "half-slave, half-free policy."

"Such a policy can only be justified at a time when the life of the nation itself is at stake," he said. "It has all the defects of Government ownership under private management and none of the benefits of private management under private ownership.

"It may be necessary to submit to this in order to win the war, and I shall vote for the bill as reported out by the committee, but believe it will be shown at the close of the war to have been neither necessary nor justifiable.

"We are already experiencing some of the blessings of Government management of the means of transportation and production. As time goes on other delights will probably follow. If the samples which have been supplied by the heads of the executive departments are fairly representative of the remaining stock in trade, those of us who need fuel and food to sustain life would best start for the banana belt early next fall.

"I hope the Senate will insist on fixing the time limit of eighteen months. I hope, too, that the American people will give this whole subject the attention it deserves before it becomes a vital issue at the polls."

The American Can Company earned a net income of $21,935,042 last year, almost double the $11,091,048 earned in the preceding year, the increase being accounted for in part by war orders taken in 1916 but not completed until 1917. The annual statement issued yesterday showed $6,000,000 reserved for Federal war taxes and the corporation income levy, a total equal to nearly 28 per cent. of the net return. The management reserved $3,500,000 for depreciation, an increase of $1,000,000, and paid out $6,583,185 in preferred stock dividends, including the regular distribution and back dividends in excess of 8 per cent.

The surplus of $5,309,674 available for common stock dividends was $233,000 larger than the year before and equal to $12.87 a share of stock. This was carried to the profit and loss surplus account, making the total at the end of the year $16,421,905.

F. S. Wheeler said in the annual statement that, despite difficulties in respect to transportation and the amount of available labor, a greater quantity of manufactured goods was delivered to customers than in 1916.

"The export contracts referred to in previous reports were completed during the year," he added, "and as expected produced substantial net profits, which are included in the general statement of earnings. The results obtained fully justified the undertaking, and because of the plant facilities thus created your company has been asked to undertake large contracts with the United States Government upon a safe and mutually satisfactory basis. The capacity of these plants with some additions is therefore fully engaged."

During the year $5,281,453 was expended on additional plants and equipment. The report stated that the company had been able to assist the Food Administration in substituting fibre containers in place of tin, thus relieving pressure on the short supply of the metal.

SHUBERTS MAKE NEW DEAL.

Selwyn & Co. to Book Through Them Hereafter.

Selwyn & Co., the theatrical producers, who in the past have booked their plays through both the Shuberts and Klaw & Erlanger, have signed a contract with the Shuberts by which they agreed to send their productions only over the Shubert circuit. This means that, closely following the acquisition of the booking privileges of A. H. Woods, the Shuberts have allied another strong force with themselves in their theatrical war with Klaw & Erlanger.

It also means that the Shuberts will acquire an interest in the three houses which Selwyn & Co. are erecting in West Forty-second Street. The Selwyn firm has two plays now running in New York, "Why Marry?" at the Astor Theatre and "Success" at the Harris

Irving Place Theatre Will Be Yiddish Playhouse After May 1.

The Irving Place Theatre, which has been the home of German drama in New York for the last twenty-seven years, will pass out of the hands of Rudolph Christians, the present producer there, on May 1, it was learned yesterday, and become a Yiddish playhouse under the management of Morris Schwartz, one of the leading actors now appearing at Kessler's Second Avenue Theatre. Mr. Schwartz expects to open the house next August with a company that shall produce the best Yiddish drama obtainable. The German company now at the Irving Place will continue there through this season, but its plans for next season could not be learned last night.

None of the principals in the transaction desired to discuss the matter last night, but Mr. Schwartz, when told that the fact of the change had been established, spoke of his plans briefly. He said that during his seven years at Kessler's Theatre he had sought to improve the Yiddish drama in New York and finally had to come to the conclusion that his plans required a comparatively small house, such as the Irving Place Theatre, which he had obtained after a year of effort.

Dr. Max Winder, the business manager of the German company, said last night that he could not discuss the matter at all, and Judge Thomas C. T. Crain, of General Sessions, one of the owners of the theatre, refused to talk except to deny that any anti-German motive had been responsible for the change. He explained that the present lessee had been holding the house on successive short-term leases and that the new lease was for a long period. According to report, it will run for ten years.

The departure of the German players from their present house will mean a sharp break with the past, as the old Irving Place Theatre has come to be identified with German drama in America and many notable performances have been witnessed there. Many persons well known in the theatre have won their position at the old Irving Place. Leo Ditrichstein first appeared in New York there, and Heinrich Conried, for five years director of the Metropolitan Opera House, was the manager at the Irving for a long time.

French Artists to Camp Upton.

The Society of Ancient Instruments, with Raymond Delaunois of the Metropolitan, will go this evening to Camp Upton, where the French artists will give a concert of the same music that M. Casadesus and his players are to repeat next Sunday in the Vieux Colombier Theatre at their American farewell.

WEEGHMAN VERBALLY POUNDED BY RICKEY FOR OFFERS TO HORNSBY

BAN PLACED ON BIG OFFERS FOR STARS

RICKEY SCORES WEEGHMAN

Head of Cardinals Says Hornsby's Holdout Is Due to Cubs' Policy of Spreading Cash Broadcast.

President Branch Rickey of the St. Louis Cardinals threw a bombshell into the meeting of the National League at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday when he got up and denounced President Weeghman and the Chicago Club for trying to demoralize the St. Louis Club by making gigantic offers for Rogers Hornsby, the Cardinal star, through the newspapers. Rickey did not mince his words, but hit straight from the shoulder, informing the club owners that Weeghman's big offers for the St. Louis players had wrought damage to his club and inflicted great injury.

Rickey implied that Weegham had given the matter wide newspaper publicity and such offers as the $75,000, which the Cubs were alleged to have offered for the crack infielder, had made the player dissatisfied, and the Cardinals would have a dificult time to sign him for next season.

Hornsby is now a hold-out, and demands a three-year contract at $10,000 a year. President Rickey stated that he would be deeply grieved to lose Hornsby, but that $10,000 salaries would be out of the question in these troublesome, unsettled baseball times.

Mr. Weeghman was not present at the meeting, but Walter Craighead, Secretary of the club, answered Rickey's charges by stating that Mr. Weeghman did not intentionally spread the news of his $75,000 offer broadcast over the country. The league took the matter in hand and went on record, in strong terms, condemning the practice of big offers, which undoubtedly means that the practice must stop.

That the peace terms of the Federal League war with organized ball will be settled within a few days is now certain because the league yesterday appointed a committee made up of H. N. Hempstead of New York, Charles Ebbets of Brooklyn, and W. F. Baker of Philadelphia to meet with a like committee from the American League to formulate some plan as to the final disposal of the Federal League parks in Brooklyn and Harrison, N. J.

These properties came into the possession of organized ball by the terms of the settlement. Organized ball agreed to repay the Federal League owners in this city part of their losses in rental for these parks. Just how they will be disposed of has not been decided, but it is expected that the park at Harrison will be retained, as some time in the future the major leagues may decide to play Sunday baseball there. It is probable that Washington Park in Brooklyn will be sold. There has been talk for some time of the borough cutting a street through the park, and the property will undoubtedly be bought up for building purposes.

As soon as the baseball meetings here have finished, the officials of organized ball and the representatives of the Federal League will get together and settle their differences. Presidents Tener and Johnson and John Conway Toole, attorney for the leagues, will represent organized ball.

The league also appointed a committee composed of Barney Dreyfuss, W. F. Baker, and H. N. Hempstead to confer with the American League committee on uniform admission prices to be charged at the baseball park. This committee will also adjust the difficulties pertaining to the collection of the war tax. This committee will likely get together tomorrow.

President Ebbets's scheme to play double headers during the early part of the season as well as at the end of the season was withdrawn, and the double header rule will be the same as last season. No double headers can be played during the first series between the clubs, but will begin during the second series. President Ebbets offered an amendment to eliminate the playing of double headers altogether, but this plan was defeated.

On the suggestion of Branch Rickey, the league changed the rule covering waivers, so that hereafter when once a club asks for waivers on a player, these waivers may be withdrawn by the club seeking them. Formerly, in the National League, when waivers on a player were asked they could not be withdrawn. The National League rule now conforms with the rule in the American League.

The league decided not to change the player limit and it will remain at twenty-two from May 15 to August 31. A motion, offered by Mr. Rickey, to make a uniform minimum price of $1,500 as a waiver price was defeated and the price of such players will be determined by the President of the league, as formerly. The new division of the world's series receipts, which provides for seven clubs benefiting in the receipts, was approved by the league.

NEEDS ATHLETIC DIRECTORS

The Y. M. C. A. announced yesterday that it has placed over 800 physical directors in our camps in America, while about 100 are now in France. Another hundred are needed at once and thirty a month additional until 300 are working among the American forces. A cablegram just received asks for fifty athletic directors immediately for the French Army. Some of the strongest men in the country are being secured.

An important meeting was held yesterday at the University Club of leading college men who will assist the Y. M. C. A. War Work Committee of 124 East Twenty-eighth Street in securing those men from among former leading athletes in the colleges. Only men above draft age can be used—men who know how to promote and organize sports for large numbers of men. These will supplement the more skilled and experienced athletic directors who are being sent abroad.

Herbert L. Pratt, Vice President of the Standard Oil Company, an Amherst man, presided, and Dr. George J. Fisher of the War Work Committee addressed the meeting. About fifteen colleges were represented. Big Bill Edwards and Walter C. Booth represented Princeton, and Edwards will act as Secretary of the committee. John L. Kemmerer, Harold I. Pratt, and W. E. Kimball represented Amherst; Walter C. Wyckoff and Frederick W. Murphy represented Brown, Perry Trafford and Alden S. Thursten, Harvard; James C. Colgate came from Colgate. Dartmouth was represented by E. K. Hall; Columbia by Charles H. Mapes; Yale by S. B. Thorne; Williams by F. Boyd Edwards; University of Pennsylvania by Robert C. Hill; Rutgers by Philip M. Brett. Every college in the country will eventually be represented on the committee. At the meeting the following additional men were nominated to serve on the committee:

G. E. Kent and Judge William Young, Cornell; Jackson E. Reynolds, Leland Stanford; Hugh White, University of Michigan; A. W. Johnson, Wesleyan; George B. Fielder, Stevens; Walter R. Okeson, Lehigh; George Gordon Battle, University of Virginia; W. S. Langford, Trinity; George Hodges, Johns Hopkins; Vincent Roberts, New York University.

Greenleaf Still Leads Concannon.

Ralph Greenleaf and Joseph Concannon battled on almost even terms in the continuation of their 1,200-point pocket billiard match at Maurice Daly's Academy yesterday. In the afternoon game Greenleaf was victor by the narrow margin of three points, the score being 100 to 97. In the night game Concannon scored 113 points to 100 by Greenleaf. On the total points scored thus far, Greenleaf is leading by [illegible]

EVERS LANDS IN BOSTON.

Johnny Evers, the veteran second baseman, who has been battered from pillar to post in the baseball world during the last few years, has jumped into a job in the American League, and last night signed a contract to play next season with the Boston Red Sox. Johnny will probably not play regular, but will be Manager Ed Barrows's right bower on the board of strategy.

Evers had three offers yesterday, one of which was from Manager Jack Hendricks of the Cardinals. The Red Sox raised the ante, so he took the job which promised the best returns. Evers is glad to get back to Boston, where he enjoys much popularity because of his great aid in winning the pennant for the Braves in 1914.

Manager Barrow also signed George Whiteman of Toronto yesterday. Whiteman used to play in right field for the Yankees a few seasons ago, and then went to the International League. He pounded the ball hard in Toronto last season. Barrow also signed Outfielder Amos Strunk yesterday. Wallie Schang is still a hold-out.

Manager Miller Huggins's persistent conferences with Frazee of Boston have not borne any fruit as yet in the shape of an outfielder, for it seems that Walker is sure to go to the Athletics as part of the recent trade between that club and Boston. Huggins will see Connie Mack when he comes here today and will make another effort to land Walker.

Wild Bill Donovan, formerly manager of the Yankees, held a conference with President Frank Navin of Detroit yesterday and accepted a position as coach of the Tiger pitchers for next season. Donovan spent his major league pitching career in Detroit and welcomes the chance to get back to his native heath.

YALE WILL HAVE A NINE.

Athletic Board Decides on Formal Baseball Team.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 13.—At a meeting of the Athletic Board of Control at Yale yesterday it was decided that Eli would be represented by a formal baseball team this Spring. Appointments were made of N. C. Lyman, 1918 S., as acting captain, and F. S. Hyde, 1919 S., as acting manager. A call for candidates for both university and freshman teams will be issued within the next week.

Schedules will conform as nearly as possible with those of former years, excepting that games will be played only on Saturday, owing to military work. Games will, in all probability, be arranged with Harvard and Princeton.

In accordance with the wartime policy of the university no professional coach will be secured and complete charge of this department will be assumed by returning graduates. Acting Captain Lyman will conduct the work at first and he expects to start practice in the cage as soon as possible.

PLAY 26-HOLE GOLF MATCH.

Special to The New York Times.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 13.—The feature in today's second round of the annual South Florida golf championship, although in the third eight, was a match that went twenty-six holes. The last eight holes were fought out on an average of under 4, A. C. Holmer of Washington winning from J. C. Hutchinson, Huntingdon Valley. It was a nip and tuck contest between these two throughout the round, Hutchinson squaring the match on the eighteenth.

The most important defeat in the first eight was that of Colonel J. E. Smith of Wilmington by Walter Fairbanks of Denver. The Colonel was not putting well. On the fifteenth he drove to the edge of the green and was down 4, but Fairbanks ended the match with a fine 3 after his tee shot had landed in a sand pit. F. C. Van Dusen was one of the favorites to come through. He defeated Bruce Dodson of Blue Hills 3 and 2. He played out the bye holes for a medal score of 75.

The summaries:

First Eight.—Fred C. Van Dusen, Minnikahda, defeated Bruce Dodson, Blue Hills, 3 and 2; C. Y. Heintsman, Hamblin, defeated H. Pemberton, Caledonia, 2 and 1; Walter Fairbanks, Denver, defeated Colonel J. E. Smith, Wilmington, 3 and 2; A. W. Cameron, Huntingdon Valley, defeated Alexander Julian, Cincinnati, 2 and 1.

Second Eight.—H. B. McClellan, Fox Hills, defeated J. A. Hull, Siwanoy, 3 and 2; C. E. Van Vleck, Montclair, defeated John Shepard, Jr., Providence, 4 and 3; Philip Corbin, Shettle Meadow, defeated Louis Washington, Midlothian, 4 and 3.

Third Eight.—C. Kaye, Hollywood, defeated S. J. Smith, New York, 1 up; Harlon K. Bolton, Onwentsia, defeated W. L. Einstein, Century, 1 up; A. G. Holmer, Washington, defeated J. C. Hutchinson, Philadelphia, 1 up, (26 holes;) J. H. Ralph, Sleepy Hollow, defeated C. J. Felber, New York, 5 and 4.

Beaten Eight.—First Division—J. B. Elwell, Apawamis, defeated A. F. Huston, St. David's, 2 up; W. P. Woods, Country Club of Virginia, defeated E. A. Kahn, Highland, 6 and 5; A. L. Gooderham, Rosedale, defeated E. G. Engalls, Midlothian, 6 and 4; Douglas Paige, Belleport, defeated E. W. Edwards, Cincinnati, 1 up.

WOMEN GOLFERS DEFY RAIN.

BELLEAIRE HEIGHTS, Fla., Feb. 13.—Women golfers did not seem to mind the early morning shower at all today and most of them played their matches and seemed to score quite as well as in the sunshine. Favorites as a rule came through without any trouble.

Miss Helen Morrison of Pittsburgh set a fast pace for her opponent, Mrs. W. A. Alexander of Chicago, and with an outward journey of 46 soon had such a command of the match that it was a hopeless task for the Chicago woman to keep up and the tenth hole saw the end of the contest. Miss Ruth Dugan had no trouble in winning from Mrs. F. Braffett of Fitchburg, Mass., and she and Miss Morrison are expected to furnish one of the best matches of the tournament tomorrow in the semi-final. Mrs. T. F. Cole of Greenwich was not able to hold her own against Mrs. J. Duryea of Springfield, Mass., and suffered defeat by 4 and 2.

First Sixteen—Miss Helen Morrison of Pittsburgh defeated Mrs. W. A. Alexander of Chicago, by 9 and 8; Miss Ruth Dugan, Chicago, defeated Mrs. Charles B. Raffett, Fitchburg, by 5 and 2; Mrs. Frank G. Jones, Memphis, won by default from Mrs. Louis Brown of Pittsburgh; Mrs. J. Duryea, Springfield, Mass., defeated Mrs. T. F. Cole, Greenwich, by 4 and 2.

Second Sixteen—Mrs. S. B. Thorne, New York, won by default; Miss Mabel Pew, Bryn Mawr, defeated Mrs. H. Ellis, White Sulphur Springs, by 6 and 5; Miss Marion Mershon, Saginaw, defeated Mrs. Ernest Page, Fitchburg, by 4 and 3; Mrs. E. Alvord, Clearwater, won by default from Mrs. H. W. Parker of Chicago; Mrs. W. W. Morrison of Toledo defeated Mrs. S. Ford, New York, 6 and 5.

Mamaux Gets Check and Signs.

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 13.—Yale tonight handily defeated Dartmouth, 35 to 12, in an Intercollegiate Basket Ball League game, taking the lead in the first minute of play, heading the Green Mountain five by 19 to 5 at intermission, and steadily increasing the margin until the referee's whistle sounded the recall. The goal tossers from foul were in poor form, Stradella, for Yale, bagging only one out of seven tries, while Hilliker and Larnom threw only one out of three each for the visitors.

Although Shedd led in Yale's scoring with six floor baskets, the Eli scoring was well distributed. Captain Stradella's all-around game was the feature of the Yale play. Dartmouth threw three substitutes into play during the final ten minutes.

The lineup:

Shedd	R.F.	Larnom

KINGSLEY FIVE VICTORIOUS.

Defeats Glen Ridge High Quintet by Narrow Margin of 18 to 16.

Kingsley School's basketball team showed a return to early season form yesterday when it triumphed over the passers of Glen Ridge High School in a closely contested game on the Kingsley court at Essex Fells, N. J., by the score of 18 to 16. The Kingsley victory was due largely to the excellent guarding work of Goggin and Dunning, who several times warded off threatened Glen Ridge scores.

Alfaro	R. F.	Williams

The Crescent A. C. basket ball quintet trounced the representatives of St. John's College of Brooklyn on the New Moon Court in Brooklyn last night by the score of 37 to 15, without being forced to extend itself. The New Moon five, with snappy offensive work, accumulated a total of 27 points in the first half, while the St. John's players were gathering 9. Swenson scored five field goals and four from foul.

The lineup:

TOMASULO IS OUTPOINTED.

Archie Walker, former metropolitan 108-pound amateur boxing champion, last night scored a noteworthy triumph over James Tomasulo of the Elizabeth (N. J.) Y. M. C. A., national A. A. U. champion, in a special bout at 118 pounds in the A. A. U. tournament held at Fort Hancock for the benefit of the enlisted men there. The contest, although not scheduled on the original program, furnished the best competition of the evening. Walker displayed a superior knowledge of boxing, and his clever and effective jabbing ability earned him the judges' award after three rounds.

Another excellent bout was furnished in the regular 118-pound class when W. P. Gilday, unattached, and M. Schwartz, University Settlement A. C., met in the final. At the end of the regulation three rounds neither the judges nor referee could agree on a winner, so an extra session was ordered. In this round Gilday earned the judges' award.

NATIONAL CITY TEAM WINS.

Standing of the Teams.

Equitable Trust	2	2	.500
Guaranty Trust	0	3	.000

The Bankers' Hockey League, which has been playing its games in Newark, moved over to the Crystal Rink last night, and the National City Bank team celebrated the occasion by downing the Guaranty Trust Company team and taking the lead in the league race. The score was 3 to 0. In the other game of a double header the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company seven had a hard task in beating the Equitable Trust Company by a count of 1 to 0.

It was the first hockey that has been played on Healy's new rink, and the skaters found plenty of opportunity for team work on the broad surface. Lovejoy, playing centre for the City Bank, scored all three of that team's goals, one in the first period and two in the second. He shot the first goal after taking the disk on a pass from Hilands, and in the second period Russell relayed the rubber to him and he shot another. The third count was made by Lovejoy when he poked the puck into the cage from a lively scrimmage.

The Farmers' and Equitable sevens were so evenly matched that in spite of many attempts to break through each other's defense the skating bankers were unable to score in the last half. The lone tally was made by Burroughs eight minutes after the first half started, when he shot the rubber past Thompson after taking a pass from Myers.

The lineups and summaries:

N. C. Bank, (3.)	Position.	Guaranty, (0.)

Keresey shot four of the goals for the winners and is now tied with Church of Browning and MacPherson of Cutler for the lead in number of goals scored. Each has eight to his credit. The player making the largest number of goals during the season will be awarded the Fellowes Cup.

The lineup and summary:

Miss Ethel Bijur won the novice figure skating contest at the Crystal Ice Rink yesterday, defeating several competitors by her superior execution of the school figures. Her closest rival was Mrs. E. S. Knapp, while Miss Sonia Wilson and Miss May Fox did some creditable free skating. Emil Fuchs of the Artists' Skating Club won the first prize among the men competitors. He has skated in many competitions in Europe, but has never won a prize until last night.

ONE BODY TO RULE TROTTING IS PLAN

N. T. A. Names Committee to Confer with Other Organizations on Amalgamation.

Thirty-four members of the National Trotting Association, representing by proxy 272 affiliations of the national organization, attended the thirtieth biennial congress of the N. T. A. yesterday at the Murray Hill Hotel. The session was the shortest in the history of the association, less than one hour being required for the transaction of all business.

The outstanding feature of the meeting was the action of the N. T. A. in taking preliminary steps toward a reconciliation with the American Trotting Association and the American Trotting Register Association. The A. T. A. seceded from the N. T. A. thirty years ago, and has since been the governing trotting body in the West. Yesterday a committee of three, headed by John C. Welty of Canton, Ohio, President of the N. T. A., was appointed to confer with a committee of the same size representing the A. T. A. and the American Trotting Register Association to work for an amalgamation of all bodies, so that the sport can be brought under one governing body.

President Welty of the N. T. A. declared yesterday that he had always favored amalgamation with the outlawed bodies, but that to date circumstances had prevented this. The negotiations now under way, Mr. Welty stated, have progressed favorably thus far, and it is expected that before the next meeting of the N. T. A. action creating one governing body for the sport will have been taken. The report of the committee appointed by the N. T. A. last December to take up the question of uniformity of rules with the A. T. A. was unanimously adopted. This report will be sent to the A. T. A., and, if it is adopted, it is expected that amalgamation will result.

The business of making registration for all competing horses a compulsory matter was referred to President Welty's committee, which will investigate and report its findings to the Board of Review for action next May.

A resolution of gratitude to the Government for its action in exempting all trotting races from the war tax was heartily indorsed. When the war tax was first instituted by the Government the trotting industry was included in the list of taxable things. A committee of trotting advocates, however, was sent to Washington to consult Government officials, and their mission ended with the withdrawal of the tax on the sport.

The report of the committee on changes in the by-laws, presented by W. H. Gocher of Hartford, Conn., Secretary of the N. T. A., was adopted without discussion. The officers of last year were re-elected without exception.

STEEL TRADE GETS A PARTIAL RELIEF

NORMAL CONDITION DISTANT

Production of Ingots in January 2,500,000 Tons, Against 3,106,500 in December.

The milder weather of the last few days has brought considerable relief to the steel and iron industry, and this has been furthered by improved railway transportation. No expectations are held in the trade, according to reports from important centres, that an approach to normal manufacturing may be expected, however, for some time to come. In addition to the abnormal weather, restrictions on output due to the war aided in checking production in January, and these have not been removed.

The Iron Age reports that the records of companies turning out 88 per cent. of the country's steel ingots indicate a production of no more than 2,500,400 tons in January, against 3,106,500 tons in December and 3,809,000 tons last October. The February rate so far has been below that of January in the corresponding period.

"Steel works operations in the Central West," this trade periodical says, "are generally at 60 to 70 per cent. of capacity and some steel plants, owing to freight embargoes and the large accumulation of unshipped product, are today doing little better than 50 per cent.

"The industry continues to look to Washington for its impulse toward better or worse conditions. Its latest concern is the sharper restriction put upon exports, the War Industries Board having warned producers not to begin rolling such steel until export licenses covering it have been issued by the War Trade Board. Blast furnace, steel works and rolling mill products, the trade is now advised, are on the conservation list and all shipments are subject to the new restriction unless bills of lading had actually issued previous to Feb. 11.

"This tightening of export regulations following recent efforts to make Government prices apply to certain iron and steel exports, even though not intended for war purposes, is disconcerting to interests that have thrived on foreign trade.

"Steel manufacturers are still much at sea as to the amount of steel they can supply apart from war uses, and the new business going on their books is small. It is plain that even in plates a considerable amount will be available for ordinary commercial purposes whenever capacity output can be reached. Both plate mills and fabricating shops have had their operations badly upset by the unreadiness of certain shipyards to take material as scheduled."

The Iron Trade Review says:

"A few days of moderate weather conditions have done more to recoup iron and steel production than any drastic exercise of governmental authority in the Pittsburgh and Valley zones. This recovery has amounted to from 10 to 25 per cent. Open hearth operations in these districts las week were at 84 per cent. compared with 59 per cent. in the storm period. The output of blast furnaces was 69 per cent., against 66 per cent. in previous weeks. Bessemer plants ran 61 per cent. of capacity and by-products works at 90 per cent., compared with 66 per cent. the preceding week. Conditions in the Connellsville coke region are the best in two months. Flood dangers at Pittsburgh and other river points serve to becloud the otherwise hopeful prospects."

Gray Goods Sales Not Large.

The local gray goods market was slow to recover from the effects of the double holiday, with the result that the volume of business put through was not large. Buyers apparently had not become accustomed to the new scale of prices, and most of the inquiries made by them yesterday were below general market levels. Practically all of the bids called for deliveries in this month, March, and April. About the only feature, so far as actual business was concerned, was the selling of a considerable quantity of 38½-inch 64-60s early in the day at 13 cents for March and April shipments. Most sellers are now asking a quarter more for these positions. Sheetings and other coarse goods were firm, but none too active. Spot printcloth prices closed this way:

38½-inch, 64-64s	*13¾c	27-inch, 64-60s	10¼c

Novelties to be Put in Limbo.

Musical comedy styles in men's and women's hose will be put on the shelf for the remainder of the war, so far as Pennsylvania manufacturers are concerned, as a result of a decision reached by the members of the National Hosiery and Underwear Manufacturers' Association who have their plants in that State. Many styles that have taken up extra time and materials in production, thereby lessening the output and increasing production costs, also will be eliminated. As another war measure, the manufacturers in their last meeting adopted a resolution indorsing plans for the establishment of automobile freight transportation lines between leading knit goods manufacturing cities of the State and between those cities and New York. An effort will be made to limit salesmen's baggage to 200 pounds, in order further to help in solving the county's transportation problems.

Burlap Sales Pick Up.

Reports from the local burlap trade indicated a nice call for these goods yesterday at full prices. Spot goods were very scarce, and sellers were firm in their demands for prices based on 17¼ cents for eight-ounce 40s and 21 cents for 10½-ounce goods of the same weight. Buying was said to have included practically all available widths and weights. Little information of interest is coming from Dundee these days, as that market is practically cut off from the local one as a result of restrictions and commandeerings of the British Government. Cables from Calcutta still report that market higher than New York.

Wealthy People Stocking Up.

February is running true to form as a time for replenishing stocks put in by the well-to-do back in the Summer, The Coal Trade Journal will say today. Many of this class of buyers are now sending in their orders to retail yards for five or ten tons, apparently expecting immediate deliveries in full. In fact, they frequently profess astonishment when told there is a real coal shortage. As a rule, however, the public is under no delusions as to the coal situation, and for that reason the trade expects little letup in the demand even after the cold weather is over. During the greater part of the last week, bituminous receipts at tidewater have been on the highest scale ever known in recent years, except in strike times.

Paper Market Quiet but Strong.

The upward tendency of prices in the local paper market during the last few weeks, and the probability that they will continue to advance for some little time to come, are said to be due not so much to active buying as to diminished supplies. The mills have been seriously handicapped by the lack of coal, which has forced shutdowns in many cases for periods of varying lengths in addition to the regular Monday closings. The curtailed output which resulted is said to have been more responsible than anything else for the higher prices which are now in force. Super printing has advanced 1 cent to 7½ cents a pound. Bond paper is obtainable in some quarters for 9¾ cents, though many are holding out for 10 cents. Manila wrapping paper and fibe wrapping, both in sheets and rolls, are quoted from 5½ to 6 cents a pound. In some cases mills will only accept orders subject to prices at time of shipment.

Prices in the local market for crude rubber have again eased off a little, in spite of the fact that there is a pretty fair business being done. The demand, in fact, is only slightly subnormaal for this time of the year, and in view of this sellers are somewhat uncertain of the cause contributing to the present softening. Prices for Brazilian rubbers at Para continue higher than in New York, but this is attributed to the competition afforded by the plantation grades in this city. The best Eastern rubbers are bringing about 3 cents a pound less than the best Brazilians, and buyers are not lightly overlooking this fact. Yesterday both first latex and smoked sheets, spot, were quoted at 54 cents, while up-river fine for the same position was held at 57. Up-river coarse and upper Caucho ball both were quoted at 36 cents for spots.

Now Come Fancy Fabric Hats.

Batik prints, adapted from ancient Japanese textiles, in foulards and other popular silks, are among the new things in hats now being shown for Spring in the local wholesale millinery trade. Highly colored patterns in Peruvian motifs are also being cut up into hats. Small shapes predominate, and chiefly popular with buyers are small sailors with high crowns, small shapes with high upturned side effects, and small Watteau types. Some have knitting bags and parasols to match. The trimmings consist of flowers, wheat sprays, and burnt ostrich.

MORE DEMAND FOR WOOL.

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 13.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say tomorrow:

South American wools still occupy the centre of the stage in the wool market. There has been much more activity in this market during the week and 2,000,000 pounds, or twice as much as the week before, was sold. More demand is made for domestic wools for civilian purposes than for some time. The advent of the heavy weight season is a cause for this.

Prices of cotton will not be fixed, according to advices from Washington. This price fixing question seems to have been the main thing to affect the market of late.

The woolen goods market continues strong. High prices indicate very limited offerings on many fabrics usually in relatively large supply. One of the important features at present is that worsteds contain much larger value than woolens.

The cotton goods market remains firm. The most prominent influence regulating prices seems to be the inability to supply the goods required, and the willingness of buyers to pay the prices asked to obtain the goods available. Until the production becomes larger, or until the needs of distributors become smaller it does not seem very likely that quotations for goods will decline greatly. The outlook is for a continued strong demand and high prices.

MORE SUITINGS OFFERED.

There were further offerings of men's wear fabrics yesterday in the local market at prices all well advanced over those of the last previous openings. All the mills are finding it hard to take care of their regular customers, and few have much to offer to the general trade. The demand for suitings is strong, and it is thought that most of the lines offered will very shortly be pretty well taken.

Range.	Weight, (Oz.)	Price.	Description.

The American Woolen Company opened fancy wool and worsted mixtures in men's suitings from the Globe mill at prices ranging from $2.75 to $4.50, from the Beoli Mill priced at from $2.40 to $4.55, and from the Puritan Mill at $3.20 up to $5.75.

Worried About Deliveries.

The question of deliveries is said to be causing local manufacturers of coats and suits more worry just now than any other one factor. It was pointed out by one prominent authority in the trade yesterday that, though there have only been two officially workless Mondays in this industry, there have been many other days on which it was impossible for employes to work because of the cold. This was true especially in January, when this city had some of its coldest weather and when the coal supply was at its lowest. With the January delays and only about twenty working days in all of February, manufacturers are wondering just where they are going to land on March 1.

A Popular Style in Dresses.

An attractive dress, made up along more or less new lines and representative of Spring styles, is being shown by one of the large manufacturers in this city. It is of blue serge, with a rather narrow skirt and the loose bolero jacket effect. Around the bottom of the skirt and on the edges of the bolero jacket there is a square design in white silk braid which is very effective. Other than this there is no trimming of any kind. The sleeves are three-quarter length and there is a small sailor collar spreading out from a V neck vest effect in black satin. The garment is extremely plain and neat looking, and is designed for service as well as for appearance. It seems to be proving unusually popular.

BUSINESS NOTES.

A meeting of the sweater buyers of the Dry Goods Alliance will be held at 404 Fourth Avenue on Tuesday next. On the following day a meeting of the handkerchief buyers of the Alliance will be held at the same address.

The R. S. Stern Company, women's straw and felt hats, Broadway and Thirtieth Street, will hold its eighth annual dinner at Reisenweber's on Saturday evening. It is given for the sales staff and visiting buyers. Among the guests will be many of the best-known millinery men in the city.

A Service That Makes Friends

Aside from the promptness of our methods and the efficiency and privacy of our service, it is pertinent to point out that we have dispensed with the usual "rock anchored" contract which accompanies financial transactions elsewhere.

Our contract expires when you say so. There is no binding clause expressed or implied.

In the doings on the Stock Exchange yesterday more attention was paid to the new downward movement in Government bonds than to the behavior of stocks in a rather quiet session. A great many people have come to look to the fluctuations in Government issues as a reflection of the status of peace prospects. The second 4s made a new low record in the course of yesterday's dealings at 94.70, which is nearly half a point under the previous low level. Traders were obviously confused by the news which developed over the long holiday. In the forenoon stocks were in fair demand and many issues scored good advances, but before the end of the session selling appeared from many quarters and brought about a sharp reaction from the best prices of the early trading. The close was irregular, with a few of the specialties showing gains of a size that stood out in marked contrast to the losses in other parts of the list. Steel receded nearly 2 points from its best figure of the earlier trading and General Motors nearly 5.

Considerable improvement has already materialized in the industrial situation in the United States as a result of the milder weather. The Iron Age reports that steel works' operations in the Central West are back to from 60 to 70 per cent. of capacity, although some plants, because of freight embargoes and congestion of accumulated materials, are doing little better than 50 per cent. of normal. Improvement in the steel trade can only be gradual until conditions which have long been militating against regular operations are removed.

The admission by Bolshevist leaders that Russia is finally out of the war, following the making of separate peace by Ukrania, had a depressing influence in financial circles, where it was assumed that the difficulty under which Germany has worked in getting petroleum and other supplies would be to some extent remedied by the new arrangement. Ruble exchange continues to be quoted at 13.00-13.25. Call money commanded 6 per cent. throughout the session yesterday. Declaration of the extra dividend on Distillers came too late to be reflected in the market price of the issue, but fitted in with the Street's expectations.

LONDON MARKET DULL.

Fear of New War Taxation Affects Demand for Securities.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—The stock market continued generally dull today on fear of fresh taxation. Competition of short time Government issues caused an easier feeling in gilt edge securities while home rails were affected by disappointing dividends. Armament and tin shares and Australian coppers were the best features. Shipping stocks were irregular. Money was in good demand and discount rates were steady. Russian exchange dealings have ceased, but transactions occurring in ruble notess show a heavy depreciation.

Calm Tone of Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Feb. 13.—The Bourse today was calm. Three per cent. rentes sold at 57f. 50c. for cash. Exchange on London was 27f. 16½c.

Five per cent. loan was quoted at 87f. 65c.

NEW GOLDSCHMIDT MERGER

Detinning and Thermit Companies Unite with $3,250,000 Capital.

A merger of the Goldschmidt Detinning Company and the Goldschmidt Thermit Company has just been formally effected, the new corporation being known as the Metal and Thermit Corporation, and having been organized with a capital of $3,250,000. W. T. Graham has been elected President of the new concern and Daniel G. Reid a Director. The concerns merged have been working under practically identical management and direction, with an entire community of interest, for two years.

The new corporation takes over and will operate four different plants, located at Jersey City and Chrome, N. J.; Wyandotte, Mich., and East Chicago, Ind. The Chrome and East Chicago plants are detinning works, the Wyandotte plant manufactures liquid chlorine, and the Jersey City plant thermit products. The corporation also has plants and welding shops in Pittsburgh, Chicago, San Francisco, and Toronto.

Sinclair Oil Completes Pipe Line.

The Sinclair Oil and Refining Corporation announced yesterday that the last length of pipe in its new 800-mile trunk pipe line from the oil fields of Oklahoma and Kansas to the corporation's new refinery in East Chicago had been laid, and that the new line would be put in operation as soon as possible. The line is one of the longest to be built in several years, and will have a capacity of 20,000 barrels a day. The corporation reports a gross income for the last quarter of 1917 of $2,280,485, and for the last six months of that year of $5,499,833.

BEST YEAR FOR WOOLWORTH

The annual report of the F. W. Woolworth Company for the year 1917, published yesterday, shows the best earnings for the company of any year since its organization in 1912. The net income for the year was $9,252,349, on sales of $98,102,858, this net income being equivalent, after payment of all preferred dividends, to an earning of $16.72 a share on the common stock.

In 1916 the company earned $15.57 a share on the common. The report includes no allowance, however, for the Federal taxes, apparently because the present dividends on both common and preferred stock leave an ample margin in the surplus for the payment of any possible levy under the present law without seriously interfering with the working capital. The company now has a profit-and-loss surplus of $19,608,492.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Cross Currents.

As far as yesterday's stock market reflected the President's message and the cessation of Russia's activity in the war, the product appeared in cross currents of sentiment. Traders who have held for some weeks that real peace negotiations were not far away appeared to find comfort in President Wilson's words; traders who have based their operations on a belief that peace would have to be obtained by a long and hard conflict said they found support for their position in the message. A not unnatural result of these opposing opinions was an irregular course of prices, which told little of the underlying status of security prices.

The United States Government 4 per cent. Liberty Loan bonds which declined sharply last week, went still lower yesterday, some sales being made at 94.70, ($947 per $1,000,) a new low record. Transactions in these bonds totaled $2,277,500, and the closing quotation was 94.76, a net decline of .44 from the closing price Saturday. Heretofore, the lowest price at which the 4s have sold has been 95.10. The 3½ per cent. bonds of the First Liberty Loan closed yesterday at 97.70, unchanged, and the "conversion 4s" closed at 96.18, a net loss of .08 from Saturday's final figure. Yesterday's total transactions in all three classes of Loberty Loan bonds aggregated nearly $3,000,000.

Subscription books to the $500,000,000 offering of 4 per cent. Treasury certificates of indebtedness will close tomorrow, and it is expected that today will witness the receipt of a large number of applications. The Governor of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, in his circular to banks in this district, made no mention of Secretary McAdoo's suggestion that the banks set aside weekly 1 per cent. of their total resources for investment in Government obligations, but merely reprinted Mr. McAdoo's telegram. The Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston sent out a letter to banks in his district, advising them to buy certificates on the "percentage plan" long before the issuance of the Secretary's telegram, and the movement in Boston has proved successful. A much wider distribution of the certificates is being obtained, and it is estimated that as a result of Governor Morse's letter the number of subscribing banks increased approximately 50 per cent. compared with subscriptions received for previous issues. The New England banks—large and small—have made a prompt response to the appeal for a wider and more even distribution of the Treasury certificates.

Royal Dutch Dividend.

Stockholders of the Royal Dutch Petroleum ompany, whose participation is represented by American shares, will receive $2.1747 per share as a dividend on Feb. 28. The Equitable Trust Company is depository for the Dutch subshares for which the American shares stand in the local market. Owners of the stock need to file with the trust company an income tax certificate before they can secure payment, a procedure which will be something new for the recipients of dividends who have been used to getting their checks from American corporations, without formality.

The Denver & Rio Grande Tangle.

The process of working out a method of procedure for a railroad under Government control, whose creditors have obtained the appointment of receivers for it, is apparently proving a long and painful one. The Denver & Rio Grande case is so far the first and only one of this kind, and the complete lack of precedents is proving embarrassing to all concerned. Representatives of all parties in the case have been in Washington and have interviewed Mr. McAdoo, but beyond obtaining a definite impression that the Director General is determined that nothing shall interfere with the efficient operation of the road, or with the paramount interest of the Government, apparently gained nothing. There is a feeling in some quarters, however, that the result may prove to be an acceleration of the efforts for an amicable settlement of the case and the vacating of the receivership without going through the long and difficult process of foreclosure and sale.

Freer Shipments of Oil.

An oil man who returned yesterday from an extended trip through the Southwest said that transportation conditions, as affecting the shipment of fuel oil and finished products, had improved substantially in the last week. Tank cars, he stated, were moving more freely than they had in several months. Warmer weather in part accounted for the betterment, with the activity of Government officials responsible for the delivery of petroleum supplies for war purposes the chief factor in opening up a state of congestion which had been serious. Many producers and refiners who had seen their inventories piling up daily during January, he said, reported that deliveries were gaining headway in an encouraging fashion.

Some ship brokers, already gloomy over their own prospects in a market where practically all valuable tonnage is in Government hands, are discussing another result of Government regulation of the industry which still further reduces their business opportunities. The result of the stringent control over the chartering business in ships not under Government requisition, by the Shipping Board, they declare, is that an increasing number of small owners of shipping, who have heretofore operated their boats under charter, are now running them themselves on berthing rates. This eliminates the broker as effectively from below as the Government requisition eliminated him from above.

Call Money at 6 Per Cent.

The rate for call money yesterday was 6 per cent., and renewals were made at that figure. The so-called "Money Committee" operated to a limited extent, and of the $30,000,000 that was lent on the board, the "pool" supplied approximately $6,000,000. Various explanations were given for the rise in rates, chief among which were: (1) that some institutions had called loans, yesterday being the first day for calling loans since last Friday; and (2) that many interior banks were withdrawing from the call money market in order to invest their funds in United States certificates of indebtedness. Despite the calling of loans, for local and out-of-town account, there was an ample supply of funds at 6 per cent., but none could be obtained at a lower figure. Last Friday 5 per cent. was the ruling rate, although some transactions were put through at 4½ per cent. Bankers look for a continuance of firm money rates.

New York cotton men with the best sources of information from the South are reporting more and more serious prospects for next year's cotton crop. In some communities, it is reported, 40 per cent. of the available farm labor is marked for the draft, and many of the remainder are steadily passing into industrial work, at the lure of wages far higher than cotton planters, even at present prices, can afford to pay. Moreover, the fertilizer famine is said to be worse than ever, and the concerted efforts of the Food Administration and the Department of Agriculture to have as much land as possible put in food crops are operating directly to decrease the cotton acreage. This apprehension about the new crop is being reflected in prices on the future market, the new crop months yesterday, for example, being considerably stronger in proportion than the old.

Capital Issues Committee Meets.

The New York Reserve District's subcommittee of the Capital Issues Committee, which consists of Chairman Pierre Jay and Governor Benjamin Strong of the Federal Reserve Bank, Frederick Strauss of J. & W. Seligman & Co.; Charles A. Stone, President of the American International Corporation, and John Morron, President of the Atlas Portland Cement Company, held a meeting yesterday at which several applications for permission to issue securities were discussed. It was learned that there had been forwarded to the subcommittee approximately seven applications, calling for the issuance of securities amounting to $50,000,000 or $60,000,000. Of the seven, four have been approved and the remaining three are still pending. All of the applications came from public utility concerns. Applications for permission to put out new securities must be made to the Capital Issues Committee of the Federal Reserve Board in Washington, of which Vice Governor Warburg is the Chairman. This committee works in co-operation with the Advisory Committee, headed by Allen B. Forbes. There are sub-committees of five members in each of the twelve Federal Reserve districts and in addition each of the sub-committees has selected an auxiliary committee composed of experts in various lines of financing. Members of the auxiliary committee are consulted whenever information or advice of a special character is desired.

The Newest Railroad President.

Some of the railroad men downtown yesterday were commenting on the career of W. P. Kenney, who has just been elected President of the Great Northern, as a fine example of the real old-time American idea. Mr. Kenney is not only the youngest railroad President in America, but he began life as a newsboy, and entered the railroad business as a telegraph operator, learning the Morse code while a messenger in the Western Union service. Incidentally, some curiosity was expressed as to whether or not the Great Northern Directors, before electing him, obtained the approval of the Director General of Railroads, as Mr. McAdoo is understood to have decided opinions regarding changes in the management of any of his various charges.

THE COTTON MARKET

The cotton market was rather dull and unstable yesterday. Such strength as there was appeared to be largely concentrated in the new crop months as a result of trade demand for those positions, reflecting apprehension regarding yield prospects. The old crop months were left largely to the speculative element, which marked them down and up and down again, but failed to develop any particular degree of excitement or interest at any stage of the session. As a result, old crop months closed off from 22 to 27 points net, while the later positions advanced 1 to 2 points.

The market opened easy, from 16 to 24 points off, reflecting nothing more serious than the cumulative effect of the declines on Liverpool during Monday and Tuesday, when the local Exchange was closed. All reports from the South were firm, however, and some houses with Southern connections bought fairly liberally on the decline. This imposed a limit on the downward swing which soon made itself felt, and during the middle of the day there was some bullish talk concerning the abolition of the Monday holidays and other minor features of the news which were interpreted favorably.

As soon as prices in the old months reached about Saturday's closing level, however, most of the buyers made haste to liquidate, particularly in March, the interest in that delivery all day being apparently purely speculative. This sent prices sagging again toward the close, which was near the lowest of the day in the near months. Exports for the day were 34,326 bales, making the total for this season 2,543,744 bales. Southern spot markets were unchanged to 35 points lower.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

The principal feature of interest in the wheat position was a report from Washington that two bills have been introduced in Congress providing for an increase in the minimum price of wheat for next season. One bill calls for a price of $2.75 and one for $2.50, compared with the fixed price on the present crop of $2.20. What price will be finally decided upon is at present entirely problematical, but new regulations are expected to take place to cover the new crop, and it is believed that the grain States will make an effort to induce Congress to increase the figure over prevailing quotations.

CORN.

Prices in the corn market showed pronounced firmness, despite very liberal receipts over the holiday, and at the close contracts were ⅜c to ½c net higher. The firmness was attributed largely to the fact that so far the large receipts have failed to depress the price of the cash article. This was considered a very fair demonstration of the strength of the cash position at large and makes it evident that there is a big waiting demand which will have to be taken care of before any material pressure can be looked for. In the local cash market kiln-dried No. 3 yellow corn was quoted at $1.82¾; No. 3 mixed, $1.80¾, cost and freight New York, prompt shipment; Argentine corn, $2.12, free on board cars.

OATS.

Larger receipts over the holiday caused an early decline of ⅜ to ⅝c in the oats market, with moderate selling on the part of commission houses. Subsequently prices rallied and closed strong, with net gains of 1 to 1¼c. Firmness in the cash position proved the principal strengthening factor. The demand was active and buyers were apparently willing to pay good premiums in the country. The prospects of a further modification of embargo regulations against shipments to the East were believed to be responsible for some of the buying. Supplies throughout the Eastern States are practically exhausted, and while large contracts have been made for shipment from the West, this movement of oats has been delayed by Government regulations. In the local cash market natural was quoted at $1 to $1.01 and clipped white at $1.01 to $1.05, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

Heavy receipts of hogs in the West on Tuesday, and the fact that prices have declined to about the 15⅝c level caused early weakness in the provision list, with more or less liquidation. Offers were readily taken, however, and subsequently prices rallied and developed pronounced strength. There were rumors that the Government had requested farmers not to sell under 15½ cents. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 25,000, estimated for Thursday, 30,000; Kansas City received 10,000, and Omaha 14,000 hogs.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Sales occurred in the cottonseed oil market of 200 barrels of March at 20.60c and 200 April at 20.50c. There was little feature to the market, however, and final quotations were net unchanged. Range of prices:

COFFEE.

The coffee market ruled very steady, and there was sufficient buying by local trade interests to readily absorb all offerings. The market opened at an advance of 6@12 points, and prices worked to higher levels later in the absence of liquidation and on short covering, the closing figures showing net gains of 18@22 points. The local spot market was firmer, though business ruled generally quiet. Rio 7s were quoted at 8¼c and Santos 4s at 10¼c. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

The International Sugar Committee continues to make liberal purchases of raw sugar, having announced sales of 100,000 bags Cubas, February loading, at 4.985c, cost and freight, and 22,000 bags Santo Domingos, afloat, at 4.749c, cost, insurance and freight. No change was reported in refined sugar, the country still being bare of sugar, partly through delay in transportation, and it will take some time for the trade to secure normal working stocks. The week's receipts at Atlantic ports were 37,369 tons, against 64,503 tons last year. Meltings were 52,000 tons, against 36,000 tons last year, and total stocks were 26,640 tons, against 162,733 tons last year.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts, two days, 5,347 packages. Business opened fair, and the market has gained a little strength on most grades of fresh creamery. The top qualities are about ¼c higher. Held creamery moving out pretty well as quoted. Renovated firm. Ladles and packing stock steady. Creamery, higher than extras, per lb., 52¼@52¾c; extras, (92 score) 51½@51¾c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 49½@51c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 47@49c; thirds, 45@46c. Creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 53½@54c; extras, 52½@53c; firsts, 50@52c; seconds, 48@49½c. Creamery, held, as to quality, 44@47c. State dairy, tubs, finest, 51c; good to prime, 48@50c; common to fair, 43@47½c. Renovated, extras, 45½@46c; firsts, 44@45c; lower grades, 40@43c. Ladles, current make, firsts, 39½@40½c; seconds, 39c; lower grades, 37½@38½c. Packing stock, current make, No. 1, 39@39½c; No. 2, 38@38½c; lower grades, 35@37½c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 2,959 cases. The market is unsettled and irregular, with values not clearly defined. Advices indicate increasing shipments in transit, and continued mild weather gives promise of steadily increasing production. Receivers are generally disposed to keep stock cleared very promptly, and those who are getting the greater part are cutting prices to insure a clearance. The total supply is very moderate, and there is a good demand in relation to the supply available. Some receivers have more orders than goods to supply them, and some sales have been made above the closing quotations which represent the bulk of the business. Fresh gathered extras, per dozen, 56½@57c; extra firsts, 55½@56c; firsts, 54½@55c; seconds and poorer, 50@54c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 56@58c; ordinary to good, 58@56c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 58@56c; Pacific Coast whites, No. 1, 55½@56c; Western and Southern gathered whites, 55@56c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 57@58c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 54½@57c; Long Island duck eggs, 57@58c.

NEW TAX CERTIFICATES.

Secretary McAdoo Announces 4% Issue Dated Feb. 15.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—To save purchasers the payment of interest accruals on tax certificates of Jan. 2, Secretary McAdoo tonight announced a new issue of these certificates, dated Feb. 15, maturing June 25, bearing 4 per cent., and identical with certificates of the current issue except as to the opening date. They will be received in payment of income, excess profits and other war taxes. The new certificates are not yet printed, but Federal Reserve Banks are authorized to accept subscriptions and issue interim receipts.

About $490,000,000 of the tax certificates dated Jan. 2 have been sold, making the total amount of certificates maturing June 25 sold up to today about $1,180,000,000.

About half of the latest $500,000,000 issue of certificates planned in preparation for the third Liberty Loan have been sold and paid for, according to Treasury reports today, and subscriptions and payments for the balance are expected by Friday, when the subscription books close.

Distillers' Securities Dividends.

Directors of the Distillers' Securities Corporation yesterday declared an extra dividend of 1½ per cent. on the $31,500,000 outstanding stock as well as the usual quarterly disbursement of one-half of 1 per cent. In voting the payment the management specified that it would be made from earnings of the current quarter. The dividend will be paid April 18 to share owners of record April 2. The company paid 1½ per cent. quarterly from July, 1916, to January of last year, thereafter reducing the payment to one-half of 1 per cent. The statement of earnings from 1917 will be issued in a few days and is expected to show a substantial increase over the preceding year.

WAR EARNINGS DECREASE.

Winchester Arms and Scovill Companies Report for 1917.

The annual reports of two prominent "war" companies, the Winchester Repeating Arms Company and the Scovill Manufacturing Company, made public yesterday, show profits which, while large in both cases in proportion to the capitalization of the companies, were well under their earnings in 1916.

The total income of the Winchester Company for the year was $2,979,048, against $4,448,851 for the previous year. Of this $2,979,048, $1,464,789 was written off for depreciation and $100,000 for "contingency reserve." The surplus for the year above this and fixed charges was $595,443, equivalent to $59.54 a share on the $1,000,000 of capital stock.

The Scovill Company shows net earnings for the year of $9,204,884, this after taking out a reserve of $2,184,000 for taxes, against $13,403,462 net earnings for 1916. These net earnings are equivalent to $184.09 a share on the $5,000,000 capitalization of the company.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Decided strength marked the early dealings on the Consolidated Stock Exchange, but the gains were not retained. At the start, developments over the three-day closing of the exchange were regarded optimistically. This was especially true in respect to the construction placed by many traders upon President Wilson's address to Congress. The market, in the later dealings, generally weakened.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

With the cash sale of a $300,000 Park Avenue residence, considerable interest was revived yesterday in private house holdings in the Lenox Hill section which several months ago experienced an extensive buying movement involving similar properties.

Mrs. Sarah Steward Collier sold the five-story American basement limestone residence at 752 Park Avenue, covering a plot 28.2 by 86 feet, 74 feet north of Seventy-first Street. Albert B. Ashforth, Inc., negotiated the transaction.

Built from plans by Trowbridge & Livingston, architects, for the occupancy of Douglas Robinson, the dwelling was sold to Mrs. Collier about ten years ago. It has been held at $300,000 and was sold for all cash.

Robert C. Knapp and Henry Brady, receivers, are considering the sale of the new twelve-story apartment house known as the Brixford at 138 to 144 West Seventy-ninth Street, on a plot 78 by 100, between Columbus and Amsterdam Avenues. Closing of this transaction is understood to predicated upon the obtaining of a release of the dower rights in the property held by Mrs. Estelle T. Payne. The house was built in 1915 by Edwin S. Brickner.

The scheduled foreclosure sale of the Sonora, the eleven-story apartment house at the northeast corner of Broadway and Fifty-fifth Street, another Payne holding, was adjourned yesterday for two weeks. The stay was granted in order to permit the receivers to consider bids that have been made privately for the property.

Last week the Verona, another valuable apartment house at the southeast corner of Madison Avenue and Sixty-fourth Street was disposed of by the receivers to William H. Barnum and William Everdell, Jr.

First Sale in Thirty-two Years.

Silas B. Brownell sold to Samuel Williams the vacant plot, 100 by 100, at 256 to 262 West 117th Street, adjoining Public School 10, at the southwest corner of St. Nicholas Avenue. The buyer will build a four-story public garage over the westerly ninety feet at a cost of $35,000. Plans for the improvement were filed recently by Louis A. Sheinart, architect.

As a site for a commercial garage I. M. Kalt purchased from George T. Mortimer, President of the Equitable Office Building Corporation, fifteen lots fronting on the Culver line branch of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company between Fort Hamilton Parkway and Twelfth Avenue.

The property runs through to Thirty-seventh Street and will be improved at once.

M. E. Hilton sold to L. E. W. Harriman of Brockton, Mass., the dwelling and plot 60 by 100 feet on the northwest side of Hamilton Street, 160 feet northeast of Laurelton Boulevard, Laurelton.

A. G. Robinson sold to M. E. R. Bryant the dwelling and plot, 50 by 100 feet, on the south side of Onslow Place, 394 feet east of Austin Street, Kew Gardens.

Plan-Filings in Queens.

Frank Braun filed plans for the erection of a five-story tenement house for twenty-three families, to be erected on the east side of Eighth Avenue, 350 feet north of Grand Avenue, Long Island City, at a cost of $20,000.

Emanule Ronzoni of Manhattan will erect a $30,000 three-story brick factory building on the south side of Jackson Avenue, 88 feet west of Buckley Street, Long Island City. The building will have a frontage of 60 feet and a depth of 100 feet.

The G. I. Stuebner Ironworks filed plans for a $15,000 addition to its plant on the south side of Twelfth Street, 350 feet east of Vernon Avenue, Long Island City. The building will be a one-story brick structure, with a frontage of 50 feet and a depth of 200 feet.

First Public Hearing of Mayor's New Tax Committee.

The recently appointed Mayor's Committee on Taxation and Investigation of Mortgage Loans will hold its first public hearing on Friday evening at 8 P. M. at the Hotel Majestic, Central Park West and Seventy-second Street. The meeting will concern itself with the Torrens law.

Proposed legislation at Albany seeking to amend the existing Torrens law has tended to stimulate discussion of the problem and a large attendance, representing landlords, brokers, and lending institutions, is expected.

Nathan Hirsch, Chairman of the committee, has extended an invitation to property owners and all other interests in real estate affairs to be present. Other members of the committee are William Randolph Hearst, William B. May, Jacob Ruppert, Jr.; Bryan L. Kennelly, Charles Partridge, Sig Cederstrom, William C. Bergen, George J. Ryan, and Walter S. E. Hall.

COUNTRY BOARD.

Long Island.

Somewhere in New York there probably is a refined, genteel man and wife with no children, age 30 to 40 years, who perhaps are boarding and not just satisfied with the surroundings under which they are living, who can well afford to pay for something nice but have not succeeded in getting the pleasant home surroundings and comforts so permanently lacking in hotels or boarding house life, that would welcome the opportunity of meeting an equally refined couple with no children and share with them the comforts and pleasures of a well-furnished home and are willing to pay their proper share of the expense necessary for these home comforts. We have two automobiles, and if company was pleasant and congenial it is only natural that courtesy would be extended. It is evident that this is not a boarding house proposition but one very unusual in itself. Very highest references will be given and required. Our home is in Flushing, Long Island. Replies will be confidential and should state approximate rate of expense agreeable in return for these homelike comforts. Y 234 Times Annex.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—A cyclonic depression is central tonight over Western Kansas and a strong anti-cyclone is developing over Saskatchewan. The weather has been fair in eastern districts. In the upper Missouri Valley and at points in the Rocky Mountain region there have been rains and snows.

The cyclonic depression in Kansas will doubtless move southeastward and recurve to the northeast, giving rain in the East Gulf States, Tennessee, the Ohio Valley, and the south portion of the Lake region and snow in the north portion of the Lake region within the next forty-eight hours.

Colder weather Friday is indicated for the upper Lake region and the Ohio Valley, Western Tennessee, and the East Gulf States and for Thursday in upper Michigan. Low temperatures will also advance eastward, overspreading the Middle Atlantic States by the end of the week.

Cold wave warnings have been issued for Montana, Wyoming, the Dakotas, Minnesota, Nebraska, extreme Western Iowa, Western Kansas, and upper Michigan.

FORECASTS TODAY AND FRIDAY.

Eastern New York and Southern New England—Fair Thursday and Friday; not much change in temperature.

Northern New England—Fair and colder Thursday; Friday fair.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

9 A. M.	8	45	9 P. M.	23	39
12 M.	18	46	11 P. M.	26	38

This thermometer is 414 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 43; for the corresponding date last year it was 12; average on the corresponding date for the last thirty-three years, 30. The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 45; at 8 P. M. it was 41; maximum temperature, 48 degrees at 2:15 P. M.; minimum, 38 degrees at 11 A. M. Humidity, 69 per cent. at 8 A. M., 62 per cent. at 8 P. M.

Post Office News.

Postmaster Patten invites attention to the necessity for careful preparation of packages for Cuba and other foreign countries. Damage to parcels results from inadequate packing and flimsy wrapping, and the packing of packages undergoing long transit must of necessity be stronger than of packages for domestic delivery. Parcels will not be accepted for mailing unless securely packed in such manner as to assure safe transmission to destination.

TAX RATE FOR 1918 HIGHER, SAYS HYLAN

RIGID ECONOMY IS URGED

In a communication to the Board of Aldermen yesterday on the financial condition of the city, Mayor Hylan stated that the tax rate for 1918 would be much higher because of what he termed the extravagance of the previous administration. The next four years, the Mayor said, must be a period of "rigid economy and retrenchment."

Although he reviewed the city's financial condition at length, using the material submitted to him several weeks ago by Controller Craig, the Mayor made no mention of municipal ownership in the message, one of the main planks of the Tammany municipal platform.

The Mayor pointed out that the gross funded debt of the city as of Dec. 31, 1917, amounted to $1,469,448,477.26, made up of long-term corporate stock, corporate stock notes, serial bonds, assessment bonds, and general fund bonds. It does not include liabilities for land acquired and contracts entered into, amounting to $61,514,872.06, or the temporary financial obligations such as special revenue bonds. Regarding the city's debt-incurring power in 1918, the Mayor said:

"Because of various additions due to sinking fund revenues the exemption from the 'debt limit' of additional rapid transit bonds that have become self-sustaining, and an estimated increase in the assessed valuation of the taxable real estate, the debt-incurring power of the city, which on Jan. 1, 1918, amounted to $50,270,155.96, will be increased during the year to about $63,212,415.64.

Working Debt Margin.

"To estimate the free working margin of debt-incurring power for the coming year there must be deducted from this amount the $31,851,077.05 of commitments made by the past administration, and the further sum of $20,500,000 estimated as being required during the year for rapid transit purposes, for the street improvement fund and fund for street and park openings, and for the cost of the Classon Avenue, Brooklyn, sewer.

"This would leave an estimated remainder of the 1918 debt-incurring power of $10,861,338.59, which may be made available for authorization for any municipal purpose."

After pointing out the necessity of adopting and adhering to a rigorous policy of economy and retrenchment in expenditures of the public funds and the administration of the affairs of the city, the Mayor took up the matter of increase in tax rates and said it is certain that the 1918 tax rate will be much higher because of the "gross extravagance in the past."

"With our assumption of office there has come to us a heritage of vast accumulated indebtedness, of disregard of the principles of economy in the administration of the city's affairs," continued the Mayor. "To remedy these evils so far as may be in our power is our task, and to that task we must address ourselves resolutely.

"Our progress in this direction must necessarily be slow. We have but little control over the larger fixed charges that must be provided for annually, to pay for the interest and amortization on the huge city debt that has been built up in the past.

"For the future we, on our part, should profit by past experience and limit as closely as possible expenditures that would result in increasing the funded indebtedness of the city.

Burdens Caused by War.

"The war has placed great burdens upon our citizens, which, in all walks of life, they have cheerfully assumed. Increased taxation, stringent governmental control and regulation of private business enterprises, the large increases in the cost of living, all necessarily involved in the vigorous prosecution of the righteous struggle in which we are engaged, have made their influence felt.

"We, as city officials, should not add to these already heavy burdens by causing the city, in a period of high prices for materials and production, to enter upon new improvements and enterprises, however meritorious they may be, that are not of immediate necessity, and can be postponed without injury to the people until the end of the war.

"We are by law the people's trustees. Let us perform the duties of our important trust resolutely to the end that wastes and extravagance in the affairs of the city may be checked and the people receive that efficient, economical and commonsense administration that they have the right to expect at our hands."

The board placed the communication on file.

DROPS A BUILDING BOARD.

Hylan Dismisses Body Which Passed on City Zoning Appeals.

Mayor Hylan, it became known yesterday, asked for and received the resignations of all the members of the Board of Appeals of the Committee on Heights of Buildings, which was organized by the Mitchel Board of Estimate to establish a zoning system through the city and regulate the height at which buildings shall be erected. Rudolph P. Miller, former Superintendent of Buildings, was Chairman of the board at a salary of $7,500 a year. The other members were Howard C. Baird, Alfred J. Boulton, William Crawford, Lancing C. Holden, Alfred R. Kirkus, and Fire Chief John Kenlon. Each member received $10 a meeting, and there were about fifty a year. Daniel Sullivan was Secretary at a salary of $3,600.

To the board was referred all appeals from the Board of Standards and Appeals, which had full charge of the zoning system as well as the height of buildings. The Legislature established the board and the Board of Estimate on July 25, 1916, appointed the members. The work of the Appeals Board consisted of passing upon all disputes that arose between architects and builders and the Building Superintendents of the various boroughs. It was said that the board still has 4,000 appeals pending.

Several days ago the Mayor sent a letter to each member of the Appeals Board stating that he intended to reorganize the board and asked for their resignations. Every member acceded to the Mayor's request. The Mayor's action was taken to mean that the entire zoning system and buildings restriction work would be done away with. It was said that labor representatives had objected to the labor man on the board, Alfred J. Boulton, and had asked the Mayor to remove him. Under the law the personnel of the board included an architect, an engineer, a builder, and a labor representative, while the Chairman had to be an architectural engineer with at least fifteen years' experience.

SOUGHT IN POLICE MURDER.

Prisoner Says Companion Who Escaped Had a Pistol.

The police of the Stagg Street station in Brooklyn last night sent out a general alarm for James Petro, aged 29, of 229 North Seventh Street, Brooklyn, who is wanted as a material witness in connection with the murder of Policeman Samuel Rosenfeld yesterday morning when two men held up several of the members of the Sixteenth Ward Democratic Club at 135 Leonard Street, Brooklyn. Jacob Silverstein of 91 Leonard Street, who was identified by the dying policeman as the man who fired the shot, was held yesterday in the Bridge Plaza Court by Magistrate Reynolds.

Silverstein asserted that he did not fire the shot that killed the policeman and said that Petro, who escaped, had a pistol. Rosenfeld died before he could be taken to a hospital.

HOLDS UP REMOVAL OF CAMP GREENE FORCE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Secretary Baker has ordered a general investigation into conditions at Camp Greene, Charlotte, N. C., with a view to determining whether that camp is to be retained for permanent use. Surgeon General Gorgas yesterday submitted to Secretary Baker a memorandum pointing out that the wet character of the soil, and the temporary character of the camp had developed conditions which should be remedied immediately.

Secretary Baker said today that orders had been given to provide for the camp all the things recommended by General Gorgas. All the conditions complained of except the character of the soil can be remedied. Whether this can be met will be determined in the investigation now to be made. Pending that inquiry, Secretary Baker has ordered that no further action looking to the withdrawal of troops from the camp be taken.

Senators Simmons and Overman of North Carolina and members of the North Carolina delegation in the House, together with several Charlotte citizens, called on Secretary Baker this morning and urged consideration of their favorable account of conditions at the camp. Assistant Secretary of War Crowell was consulted. He had recently made an inspection trip through many of the Southern camps and expressed the view that the conditions at Camp Greene were not local and not peculiar to that place, but were general throughout the Southern camps and were due to the unusual Winter.

WRANGLE OVER BUCHANAN.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—A bill to accept a $100,000 statue of James Buchanan, fifteenth President of the United States, provided for in the will of his niece, the late Mrs. Harriet Lane, was postponed in the House of Representatives today after several hours' debate, in which Buchanan's right to national remembrance was denied.

Representative Sladen of Texas, in charge of the bill, made this motion because, he said, it was clear a favorable vote could not be reached at once.

Representative Walsh of Massachusetts decried the former President's lack of decision and courage. He said he had justly earned the title "Ten-Cent Jimmy." He demanded to know what great action the former President had taken to be enshrined in the nation's memory.

Representative Moore of Pennsylvania took the floor in defense, saying: "For my part, I do not think it wise policy for the Congress of the United States, under the most provoking circumstances, to place the stamp of its disapproval upon a former President."

Representative Reavis of Nebraska retorted that he felt it no duty of his to admire a man simply because he had occupied the White House.

"I'll vote for this bill!" cried General Sherwood.

Debate was closed by Representative Cannon, who walked to the front of the room with his left arm hanging in a sling, the result of a fall from which he has not completely recovered. "Let us forget," he said. "In God's name let the dead past bury its dead."

HARDWARE MEN TALK TRADE

The second session of the joint convention of the Pennsylvania and Atlantic Seaboard Hardware Association and the New York State Retail Hardware Association held yesterday at the Hotel Astor was devoted principally to the discussion of matters affecting the trade as the result of the war. H. M. Kirk of New Castle, Penn., President of the Pennsylvania and Atlantic Seaboard Association, presided. John R. Gamble of Montgomery, Ala., President of the National Retail Hardware Association, discussed "Finding and Solving Hardware Problems." An open forum followed. William W. Orr, Assistant Secretary of the National Association of Credit Men, spoke on the advantages to be derived from the use of trade acceptances in the retail hardware business.

COL. ROOSEVELT MAKES CONTINUED PROGRESS

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt's continued progress yesterday led to the general hope last night on the part of those who are watching developments in his case that the former President had passed beyond the probability of further setbacks and that his recovery from the operations he underwent in Roosevelt Hospital ten days ago would be steady, if slow. Miss Josephine Stricker, Colonel Roosevelt's secretary, gave out this bulletin at the hospital early yesterday afternoon:

> Drs. Martin and Duel report very satisfactory progress of Colonel Roosevelt. He is, of course, weak, but on the whole his condition is most satisfactory.

Dr. Walton Martin is the chief surgeon in the case, and Dr. Arthur B. Duel is the specialist who operated on the patient's ears. The two physicians saw the patient again early last evening, and subsequently it was announced that, as they had found no change in the satisfactory condition reported earlier in the day, another formal bulletin would not be issued last night. It was learned, however, that it had been found that the acute inflammation in the patient's left internal ear which for several days was the chief cause for alarm, had receded beyond the danger zone.

All signs, official and otherwise, regarding Colonel Roosevelt's condition yesterday were hopeful and encouraging. In the morning it was made known that Dr. Harold Keyes, house physician at the hospital, and three trained nurses again had kept sharp watch over the patient. The patient had slept most of the night, and had awakened at 7 o'clock in the morning much refreshed.

Another evidence of a better outlook for the patient lay in the fact that Mrs. Roosevelt, for the first time, left the hospital yesterday for a brief period. Mrs. Roosevelt attended Lenten services in the Church of Zion and St. Timothy in West Fifty-seventh Street.

In addition to messages of sympathy from all parts of the country there again were many callers yesterday. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt spent an hour with Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, the Colonel's daughter, and his two sisters, Mrs. Douglas Robinson and Mrs. Cowles. Clive Bailey, President John Grier Hibben of Princeton University, Julian Street, ex-Congressman David Mercer of Nebraska, Russell J. Coles, the ex-President's companion on several fishing trips, and Mr. and Mrs. Le Roy Percy of Greenville, Miss., were others who called. Michael Donovan, the boxing instructor, who said he "didn't box with Colonel Roosevelt at the White House, he fought with him," was an anxious inquirer during the day.

2-DAY PIANO SALE

Thursday and Friday only—Sale positively closes 9 o'clock Friday evening. Piano department will remain open to accommodate those who cannot come during the day.

We have prepared for the biggest 2 days' business in our history. If you will come to our showrooms you will see that the Pianos and Player-Pianos that have just arrived have packed our floors until we are seriously inconvenienced. This sale is offered to produce more space, and the great reductions you will find at this time would not be made if it were not for this fact. The instruments represent the greatest values we have ever offered in our history. Every one has been gone over and is in splendid condition. Several of them we could call as good as new, as you would agree. The values are so great that we expect to sell them all by Friday 9 p. m.
